THE first Pacific ocean fliers came back from Honolulu by steamer, leaving the big army plane there. A good idea.

It would be wise to send one big plane a week to Hawaii for the next year or two, leaving the planes there, building up a big air fleet on these interesting islands. There is plenty of room to practice flying there, and the planes might be useful in case we ever wanted to help friends on the other side of the Pacific. Pale sentimentalists will object on the ground that it might look "war-like," but pale sentimentality would not protect the country in case of war. AIRPLANES WOULD.

It was made clear at Geneva that Uncle Sam's foolish boy statesmen working at the Washington conference did not protect this country as they thought they were doing. Admiral Jones shows that the American navy is NOT first in swift high powered destroyers, but a bad third, England and Japan coming ahead.

That won't surprise anybody who knows the calibre of men that represented Japan and England at the conference, compared with those that represented the United States.

American fliers going East and West over the Pacific and the Atlantic are said to have given Great Britain "a new thrill," also causing the British to feel a sudden doubt as to England's "air superiority."

The doubt can be settled only by proper government action.

Americans fly well. So do British, French, Germans, Russians and Japanese. Each nation thinks it has the best fliers. Having three times the population of Great Britain or France, we probably have more good fliers than they, flying now or ready to learn in a week.

The main thing lacking here is the right kind of flying machines and enough of them. You can trust the British to see that they have the machines. The French have them already; also the Japanese. As for the Americans, they are giving fancy exhibition flights and saving money on the fighting air fleet that this nation ought to have.

In the long run religion wins. When Kemal Pasha took charge of Turkey, he took the veils from women's faces, the fez from men's heads, and power from the Caliph supposed to represent Mohammed. Prophet's religion was supposed to play second fiddle. But now a young man and woman that took the religious eclipse too seriously go to prison for a month for calling "religion as bad as opium taking" and adding that "all prophets are liars."

Kemal's government learned, as Napoleon learned, that without a "spiritual police force" government is difficult.

Prohibition that eliminates beer and wine and does not eliminate bootleg whiskey works here and there in somewhat disappointing fashion. GOLDEN EAGLE PLANE REPORTED FOUND; NO TRACE OF OTHER TWO

Honolulu, Aug. 29 (A.P.).—The Signal Corps at Luke Field today intercepted two messages said to be from an unidentified vessel saying that the missing plane, Hearst's Golden Eagle, had been found. The messages were partly undecipherable. The Signal Corps has no idea whether the messages are authentic.

San Francisco, Aug. 20 (A.P.).—The broad expense of the Pacific Ocean today cloaked the disappearance of three airplanes and their crews of six men and one woman as approximately 25 ships cruised at full speed over the great circle route on missions of rescue.

A mysterious red flare at midnight sent the S. S. West Sequana to a spot approximately 250 miles west of San Francisco and 70 miles north of the great circle route, where the Dallas Spirit is believed to have fallen into the sea while on its way to Honolulu, in an attempt to sight the Miss Doran and Hearst's Golden Eagle, missing Dole flight planes.

The ship failed to find any traces of the plane after four hours' search and resumed her course.

The Dallas Spirit, piloted by Captain William P. Erwin, of Dallas, Texas, with A. D. Reichwaldt of Alameda, Cal., as navigator, radioed two frantic S O S calls shortly after 9 o'clock last night, and added that

M'NIDER IN AIR CRASH UNHURT, PILOT INJURED

Danbury, Conn., Aug. 20 (A.P.)—Hanford Macnider, assistant secretary of war, was in a plane which overturned in making a landing at the airport today, but was unhurt.

His pilot, Lieutenant Maxwell Balfour of Mitchel Field, L. I., suffered a contusion of the hip.

Assistant Secretary Macnider came here to speak at the State convention of the American Legion of Connecticut.

The cause of the plane's upset was soft ground where it landed, the condition being due to heavy rains.

MacNider took the air again this afternoon for Mitchel Field, a passenger in a plane piloted by Lieut. Louis N. Eller, Recular Army instructor for the 118th Observation Squadron of the Connecticut National Guard.

Mr. MacNider will continue to Washington in his own plane which he said he had left at Mitchel Field.

SEVEN FLEE BLAZE IN ATTLEBORO AUTO INN

North Attleboro, Aug. 20.—Seven persons escaped in their nightclothing when the Lantern of the White Duck, a well-known roadhouse on South Washington street, near the Attleboro line, was destroyed by fire early today.

Seventy-year-old Philip Swartz, one of the proprietors, was carried to the street by his nephew, Louis Swartz, the elder man being an invalid.

Mrs. Tina Ferranti was assisted through the smoke-filled corridors to safety by her husband, John, while Joseph Cieco, 22, leaped from a second-story window to the ground.

The fire of undetermined origin, was discovered by Louis Simmons, a farmer who lived across the road. He gave the alarm and then awakened the sleeping inmates who were on the third floor.

Within ten minutes from the time the fire was discovered the restaurant, which was in a new portion of the building, was swept by the flames and the barns was burning. By the time the fire fighting apparatus from North Attleboro and Attleboro arrived, practically the entire structure was destroyed. The loss was estimated at $60,000.

SISTER ENTERS STATE'S PRISON TO EMBRACE VANZETTI

SISTER SOBS FAREWELL IN ARMS OF VANZETTI

Within a pace or two of the grisly chair of doom, in the death house at the Charlestown State Prison, today a worn, exhausted woman on the verge of collapse, threw her sobbing form into the arms of her brother, who within sixty hours must forfeit his life to the State.

It was the meeting between Bartolomeo Vanzetti, doomed radical, and his sister, Luigia, who raced across the Atlantic Ocean from the Vanzetti home in Italy to embrace her brother in a last farewell before the law takes its toll as the third day of the coming week is ushered in.

"Bario! Oh, Bario!"

This was all the sister could sob as she nestled against the breast of her doomed brother.

The grim, gray walls of the death house have looked upon scenes of tragedy and human anguish times

Sacco Calls for Blueberry Pie and Gets It

Nicola Sacco, erstwhile hunger striker, surprised State Prison guards today by asking that blueberry pie be brought to him in his death cell.

This was the first time either he or Vanzetti had taken advantage of the privilege, accorded death house inmates, of having any delicacy they wished instead of the regular prison food.

The pie was given him and he ate it with gusto, but Vanzetti declined any special favors.

HILL RUSHES TO SEE JUSTICE HOLMES

A stay of execution was denied to Nicola Sacco and Bartolomeo Vanzetti today by Judge James M. Morton of the United States District Court.

The doom of the two condemned men seemed doubly sealed when defence counsel were balked in an effort to file a petition for a writ of certiorari in the United States Supreme Court at Washington.

Fighting desperately against time, defence attorneys appealed to Governor Fuller and Justice Oliver Wendell Holmes of the United States Supreme Court for delay.

John G. Sargent, attorney-general of the United States, was appealed to by two legal representatives of the Citizens' National Committee for Sacco and Vanzetti, at his home in Ludlow, Vt., and they reported that "he displayed much concern and has taken under advisement the matter of Federal intervention."

As Attorney Arthur D. Hill, chief of the array of defense counsel, started for Beverly to see Justice Holmes, Vanzetti was being taken out of his death cell to embrace, amid tears, his sister, Luigia, in their first meeting in 19 years.

Guards stood close at hand, for earlier in the day Vanzetti was raging madly against fate in his narrow cell.

The execution is now less than three days distant. The executioner has been ordered by Warden Hendry to arrive in time

SACCO LAWYER BALKED IN U. S. SUPREME COURT

Washington, Aug. 20 (A.P.)—Counsel for Sacco and Vanzetti were unable to file a petition for review of their conviction of murder in the Supreme Court today because the papers presented were held to be not in satisfactory form, no records of the case being presented.

Michael A. Musmanno, acting for the condemned men, was at the office of the clerk of the court when it opened this morning at 9 o'clock. It quickly developed during his talk with a representative of the clerk's office that his papers were not in proper form.

He left with the clerk the papers he had brought with him, which included two petitions, one to bring up for review the case as developed before the Supreme Court of Massachusetts and the other for review of the action of the Superior Court.

He also left at the clerk's office filing fees for the two cases and promised that the records in both would be here early next week. The cases cannot be filed until the records are presented.

for performing his grim duty in the early minutes of next Tuesday morning.

Extra police stood guard through the city as the lawyers' race against time went on.

The rebuff in Washington came when Attorney Michael A. Musmanno of defense counsel tried to file a petition for writ of certiorari, asking a review of the entire case by the U. S. Supreme Court because of the alleged prejudice of the trial judge, Judge Webster Thayer.

Officials in the clerk's office of the highest United States tribunal informed Attorney Musmanno that the petition could not be accepted because complete records of the case were not presented with it.

Waiting impatiently in Boston, Attorney Hill received this news by telephone. He promptly telephoned to the clerk of the U. S. Supreme Court, notifying him that certified copies of the records of the case in Norfolk County were being made and would be forwarded as soon as ready.

Hill also told the clerk that a copy of the record of the Supreme Court proceedings in this State was already on its way to Washington and that, in addition, he was sending a certificate to prove that the Norfolk County records were being prepared.

After receiving this information, the clerk at Washington agreed to have the petition left with him, though not to receive it as formally filed, Hill explained.

Hill then left for Beverly to see Justice Holmes, to explain the situation and to ask a stay of execution. As he was leaving he announced that William Schuyler Jackson, former attorney general of New York, had joined defense counsel.

The trip to Beverly was made by automobile, Atty. Richard C. Evarts accompanying Hill. After a short stop in Salem for luncheon, they went on to the judge's Summer residence.

Only Other Hope

The only other hope for a delay lies with Governor Fuller and the executive council, to whom Attorney Hill has appealed by letter.

Federal Judge Morton seen in Fall River by Attorney Elias Field, triply disappointed the hopes of the defense forces. In addition to refusing to grant a stay of execution, he denied a writ of habeas corpus and declined to allow an appeal from this decision.

This was the second failure within two days to forestall the execution. The first attempt was before Chief Justice Hall of the Superior Court. Just what transpired during the conference between him and Attorney Hill is not known, but at any rate no stay of execution was forthcoming. Hill's announced purpose in seeing him was to seek a stay of execution.

Throughout the world, including the leading American cities and every sizable community in New England, police again mobilized for action because of the realization generally that nothing but a shred of hope remains for Sacco and Vanzetti.

Police Mobilized

In the Hub, policemen in uniform and plain clothes, doing duty singly, in pairs and in larger detachments, are watching every strategic point, in a duplication of the concentration of guards of ten days ago, before a respite had saved the two men temporarily from the electric chair.

Special watch is being maintained over the subways and tunnels, railroad stations, the State Prison, public buildings, like City Hall, the State House and the Federal Building, as well as all places where the gathering of week-end crowds made extreme precautions advisable.

Boston and vicinity were virtually a great armed camp as pleasure seekers came and went on their holiday jaunts.

Attorney Hill's letter of appeal to the Governor asking a new respite was as follows:

"Dear Sir:

"In the case of Sacco and Vanzetti, I have sent to Washington for filing with the Supreme Court of the United States writs of certorari in order to bring the case before that tribunal.

"I have also ordered copies of the missing records. Under these circumstances I respectfully request that a further respite may be granted the defendants in order that the cases may be dealt with by the Supreme Court of the United States.

Wants More Time

"I may add that I regret being obliged to make this further application to you and propose taking what steps are possible to secure an order for a stay from some United States court.

"In view, however, of this closeness of time it is not certain that it will be possible for us to do this, and for that reason I feel constrained to make this application to you. I do not feel that the matter ought to rest in a race for time.

"Our petitions for certiorari were sent to the Supreme Court at Washington at the earliest possible moment subsequent to our receiving word of the adverse decision in the cases by the Supreme Judicial Court of the Commonwealth, and every possible step has been and will be taken to expedite the cases to a final conclusion."

Attorney Hill was asked if there was any chance of an appeal to Justice Louis D. Brandeis of the U. S. Supreme Court, now Summering at Chatham on the Cape, for a stay of execution, but he replied that Justice Holmes was the proper authority to which to address such a plea, this being his assigned district.

Asked if a postponement would be sought on the ground of Vanzetti's reported weakened mental state—should all other resources fail—Hill said: "I couldn't say anything as to that at this time."

The alarming condition of Vanzetti as the shadow of the chair engulfed him was worse today than yesterday, according to prison officials, and their statement was well borne out by unmistakable signs that penetrated to the outside world from the gloomy three-celled deathhouse.

In the small hours of this morning the man's voice rang through the death-house, and could be plainly heard outside, while the quieter tones of Nicola Sacco and Celestino Madeiros could be distinguished as they tried vainly to calm the man who is doomed to go to the chair with them early Tuesday morning.

Shrieks "Persecution"

"For seven years they have persecuted me," Vanzetti shrieked over and over again. "For seven years, seven years. I never killed a man. Please Turn to Page 5, Column 1.

Sister in Hub Wants Vanzetti to Forsake ~ Anarchy and Save His Soul

CHARACTERISTIC POSES OF LUIGIA VANZETTI, SISTER OF DOOMED MURDERER, AS SHE ARRIVES FROM ITALY

Amid the hue and cry which has gone up from radicals in all sections of the world for release of the South Braintree payroll murderers, one voice is raised that Bartolomeo Vanzetti desert the way of anarchy and again embrace his faith in God. This voice is that of the man's sister, Luigia, who has come from Italy with the plea of Vanzetti's pious old father that the prisoner turn back to the church. She is shown here as she arrived. She declared she had abandoned hope for his life but prayed that she might yet save his soul by inducing him to quit anarchy.

PRES. COOLIDGE KEEPS OUT OF SACCO CASE

Rapid City, S. D., Aug. 20 (I.N.S.) —President Coolidge cannot and will not have anything to do with the Sacco-Vanzetti case, it was stated here today.

An appeal of the Citizens' Committee for a stay of execution, which was forwarded to the Summer White House by the State Department, was sent back promptly to Washington to the Department of Justice, "for reference."

On several occasions Mr. Coolidge personally has made it clear that he is powerless to act; that the matter is solely one for the Governor and courts of Massachusetts.

The greatest precautions are being taken to guard the President during the present crisis. The secret service staff has been increased by two men, who spend their entire time at the executive offices here.

Additional soldiers have been sent from Fort Meade to reinforce the army detail at the State game lodge, and orders have been issued to sentries to shoot upon any failure to obey orders.

Lindy Brings Medal From Belgian King to Coolidge

Rapid City, S. D., Aug. 20 (A.P.) — Announcement was made today of the presentation of a medal to President Coolidge by King Albert of the Belgians in recognition of his interest in aviation.

The medal was entrusted to Colonel Charles A. Lindbergh at the time of his reception in Brussels. He brought it to the White House. The medal is cast in bronze and on one side bears the President's name and on the other the words: "High protector of the International League of Aviators."

14,000 POLICE IN N. Y. AGAIN ON SACCO DUTY

New York, Aug. 20 (A.P.)—New York's entire force of 14,000 policemen, ordered out when word reached here of the Massachusetts Supreme Court's decision adverse to Sacco and Vanzetti, were back on emergency duty today for their vigil against possible disorder.

All subway and elevated stations, public and semi-public buildings, all bridges over the East River, respectively, were again under heavy guard. The precautions are similar to those taken last week following the explosions of two bombs in subway stations.

Special police arrangements are being made for the demonstration called by the Communist Sacco-Vanzetti emergency committee in Union square, Monday afternoon. More than 1,000 police, it is planned will be at the scene and 1,000 in reserve in the neighborhood. A gathering of 50,000 people is predicted by leaders of the committee.

JANE ADDAMS AND 9 PLEAD FOR SACCO

Chicago, Aug. 20 (A.P.)—An appeal bearing the names of Jane Addams, Norman Hapgood and nine other persons, requesting men and women of Chicago and other cities to join in an eleventh hour plea for stay of execution or commutation of sentence, in connection with the famous Sacco-Vanzetti case, was received through the mail by many local people today.

The appeal which bore no identification marks and which was sent in a plain envelope, requested that telegraphic communications be addressed to Paul U. Kellogg, 112 East 19th street, New York city, or Governor Fuller direct.

Other names on the appeal were: Bruce Bliven, C. C. Burlingham, John Lovejoy Elliott, Haven Emerson, M. D., Paul U. Kellogg, all of New York; Waldo Cook, Springfield, Mass.; Alice Hamilton, M. D., and Margaret Homer Shurtleff of Boston; Norman Hapgood, Washington, D. C., and Dora Lewis (Mrs. Lawrence Lewis), Philadelphia.

2 SOAKED WITH GASOLINE AND BURNED

Baltimore, Aug. 20 (I.N.S.).—A fiendish murder, in which one man was burned to death and another burned so badly he probably will die, was perpetrated here today.

John C. Haraway, 25, is dead, and his companion, Chester Pugh, 29, is dying in Baltimore City Hospital.

They were beaten up, gasoline poured over them and a match applied to their clothing.

Police here arrested a local pugilist, known as "Kid" Julian, and Edward Gaff, his companion.

3 SPECIALISTS ATTEND WIFE OF DEMPSEY

Chicago, Aug. 20 (A.P.).—Three specialists have been called into consultation by Estelle Taylor, wife of Jack Dempsey, after a somewhat serious turn in her condition, it was learned today.

The excitement attending the trip from the coast and the enthusiastic reception here was reported to have led the screen actress to fear a relapse.

Dempsey cancelled all his engagements so that he could be with his wife until she is resting easier, and although her condition is not regarded as alarming, he is devoting all his time to making her more comfortable.

Dempsey said he thought that if everything moved along as it is now she would be all right in a few weeks. His friends, however, expressed fears that he would worry too greatly and that this perhaps would affect his chances to beat Gene Tunney when they meet next month.

WOMAN FOUND LYING IN COMA IN GUTTER

A well-dressed woman, about 40, wearing diamond earrings and of apparent refinement, was found unconscious in the gutter in Hancock street, Everett, a short distance from Broadway, early today and efforts of police and doctors have so far failed to find the cause.

"I was in Brookline yesterday morning," are the only words the woman has uttered since she was found. These few words came haltingly in a brief period of consciousness at the Everett police station, prior to being taken to the Massachusetts General hospital.

The woman was found by an automobile party, comprising two men and a woman, whose names the police did not get but who are known, police said, to be residents of Everett.

She was lying face down on Hancock street, about 100 feet from Broadway. They told the police they believed she had been hit by an automobile, but Dr. Sidney Listernick, who was summoned by Sergeant James J. Sanderson, said he could find no marks to indicate as had been struck.

The woman was turned over to Police Matron Garee for the night but when her condition became very weak, two hours later, the doctor was again summoned by Sergeant Pietro Florentino and she was taken to the hospital.

There was a wedding ring on her finger, but the inscription was not legible, police said. Her clothing, mostly of dark color, was of excellent quality, police said. There was no pocketbook or other article on her person to aid in identifying her.

UNITED STATES "POSTMEN OF THE AIR"

This is the NP-10 with the pilot and crew that tomorrow take off from Squantum to overtake the Leviathan with last-minute mail. Postal officials believe the plan perfectly feasible and that it will be a several hours off transatlantic mail schedules.

READY FOR MAIL HOP TO SHIP

Final details of Lieutenant Clarence H. Schildhauer's mail hop from Squantum to the westward-bound Leviathan were completed today when the naval pilot visited the Boston Postoffice in company with Captain Cook, aide to Rear Admiral Philip Andrews.

After making a formal call at Postmaster Baker's office, the two officers proceeded to the transportation division, where a study was made of mail pouches of various sizes. Lieutenant Schildhauer finally selected one of the smallest pouches as most easily handled. The pouch was filled with mail by Inspector J. W. Hunt, and weighed. "It was found that seven pouches would be needed.

The mail will leave New York by the Gilt Edge Express at 5:02 tonight. After arrival in Boston it will be taken by Inspector Joseph J. Nolan by automobile to Squantum. The hop-off will take place at 2 a. m.

"The Leviathan will be between 375 and 400 miles at sea," said Lieutenant Schildhauer.

"We ought to make it in a little over three hours. There will be no one on board the NP10 except the crew. There will be no attempt to pick up mail from the ship."

Find Loss on Student Loans Amounts to Almost Nothing

New York, Aug. 20 (A.P.).—Less than one per cent. of loans advanced to college students in the last five years by the Harmon Foundation have not been refunded, the organization announced today. Loans amounting to $275,000 made to 1,723 students have been promptly repaid.

The Foundation, after studying the disciplinary influence of liquidating these obligations, concludes that "far from being a handicap to any of a student's plans, this experience is most useful to every student and prepares him to develop with greater rapidity than would be possible without it."

MAYOR PRAISES $25,000 PRIZE FOR FLIGHT

Boston will accord an official welcome to the first European aviator to land at the Airport that will be as hearty and inspiring as the greeting given by Paris, London and Berlin to our own transatlantic fliers, Mayor Malcolm E. Nichols announced.

"The $25,000 transatlantic prize award being raised by Boston business men for the first transoceanic flier to land within our city gates is a splendid thing," said the Mayor.

"I wish that the city could participate in completing the amount required. It is unsatisfactory, however, to have the city involved in co-operative ventures of that sort. I think the business men of the city should support the fund and quickly complete the subscription.

"It would be more feasible for the city to make an entire award of $25,000 than to share in the subscription. However, if I had $25,000 at my disposal, I should be inclined to put it to immediate use in providing urgently needed improvements at the Airport.

CITY'S CONTRIBUTION.

"The city has done a lot of grading and filling, making use of an appropriation of $18,000. It should be borne in mind, however, that when the State undertook to fill in the flats that now comprise the East Boston airfield, it filled up the city sewer conduits.

"The result is that we have had to undertake the construction of pumping plants that will run to $400,000 in cost. This pumping plant is now under construction. It is an absolutely necessary piece of work, as the filling in of the sewers caused water to back up along a wide territory over there.

"To my mind, this $400,000 should be looked upon as Boston's contribution to the Airport. Correspondingly, the State Legislature should feel the obligation of providing a like amount to be applied to lighting and improving the field.

PRAISES AMERICAN.

"The Boston Evening American is to be congratulated upon its work on behalf of the Airport. This and the other items of the Boston Evening American platform, including the construction of a Municipal Auditorium, are thoroughly sound and far-sighted principles that should commend themselves to the support of every forward-looking citizen."

Subscriptions to the $25,000 fund received to date include:

Sheldon R. Fairbanks
National Shawmut Bank	$1,000
Boston & Maine Railroad	500
Jordan Marsh Company	500
Steven Tufts	250
W. Irving Bullard	250
Hotel Statler	100
American Trust Company	100
Ralph Hornblower	50
Total to date	$3,350

Contributions should be made out to the Boston Airport Transatlantic Purse and mailed to the Transatlantic Purse Trustees, No. 89 Federal street, Boston.

MODEL AIRPLANE CONTEST TO BE FEATURE OF SHOW

A model airplane contest with classes of all contestants will be a feature of the Boston Radio-Aero Exposition at Mechanics Building, September 26-October 1, according to announcement made today by Sheldon H. Fairbanks, director.

The contest will have two divisions —flying and non-flying models. The flying model contest will be staged on the playground, Boston Common, September 24, and will consist of both motor-driven and glider types.

The prizes will be awarded at the Boston Radio-Aero show, Tuesday, September 27. The whole contest is to be judged by Theodore S. Holcombe, president of the Boston chapter of the National Aeronautic Association and former secretary of the aviation committee of the Boston Chamber of Commerce; John D. Hanghey, president, Air Service of New England, Inc., and Sidney Sewall, local manager for Colonial Air Transport, Inc., and Maine's only "Ace" in the World War.

BETTY ALDEN'S COMMENT ON SOCIETY

Committee in Charge Working Overtime to Insure Success of Cohasset Horse Show; Entries Number in the Hundreds

WITH ITS SEVERAL HUNDREDS OF ENTRIES, AND CARRYING the interest of the whole countryside, the Cohasset Horse Show takes its lengthy way today. A downpour of rain yesterday having made it an event postponed from Friday to Saturday, most extraordinary precautions were taken to insure a dry ring today and one perfectly safe for the timber toppers and their riders. Chairman Hugh Bancroft together with Miss Jessie Bancroft and Mrs. William Gagnebin are a busy trio, as all yesterday's perfected plans had to be held over for today to make a well managed show.

LAST YEAR FOR THE FIRST TIME COHASSET PUT ON A HORSE show. Everyone in several counties came out. It was enormously successful. This year the same promoters are out to bring the show up to the Chestnut Hill or Myopia standard. Their object is attained, it seems, with several hundred entries and classes going on from early morning until the evening. Mrs. William Gagnebin, with a stable full of horses, is particularly anxious to have her newest possession, "Golden Arrow," carry off some trophies for the Gagnebin collection.

FROM THE BANCROFT STRING WITH ITS MANY BLUE RIBBONERS there will be a handsome hackney, Miss Crompton, shown in one or more of the harness classes in all probability with Miss Jessie Bancroft holding the reins. Miss Leslie Blake, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Arthur Blake, is to ride the Bancroft mount "Brilliant Crest" as well as Mrs. Thomas James' "Roanoke" in the saddle and combination classes.

FOR THE PONY CLASSES THERE ARE INTERESTING ENTRIES and several small and sagacious animals will be put through their paces. Miss Mary McElwain's Betty and a basket cart with its bright crimson wheels will be loaded by Miss Mary Nash. Arthur Blake, Jr., young son of the Arthur Blakes of Dedham and Cohasset, shows the Blake's cherished pony "Brownie" drawing a cart of bright blue.

SPEAKING OF THE BLAKES, THERE IS A GAY AND EXCITING Winter before the elder daughter of the family, Miss Harriette, who this season is launched on the social seas. Her mother, Mrs. Arthur Blake, is also greatly concerned in introducing to smart Boston her niece, Miss Betty Blake, whose baptismal names are "Mary Elizabeth" and who is the daughter of Dr. John Bapst Blake and Mrs. Blake.

BOTH GIRLS WILL HAVE A MERRY SEASON. BOTH ARE RICH in charm and grace and all those attractions that make the debutante "successful." And both have a wealth of adoring relatives and friends to make rosy their paths. Miss Betty Blake and her parents are back in this country again after several years abroad, where Miss Betty's education was completed via select establishments for young ladies in France and England. With Mrs. Arthur Blake at the helm socially, these girls have before them a brilliant prospect.

DURING THE BRIEF NORTH SHORE STAY OF SENATOR JAMES WADSWORTH and Mrs. Wadsworth at "Alhambra" Mrs. William Gordon Means is entertaining with her usual eclat. Always the brilliant hostess is this smart matron. Being herself cosmopolitan, chic and interesting, it follows that her guests come from the same lustrous sort, attractive and important as well as interesting. The Wadsworths move on to Boston from Newport where they stayed with the Walter Bruce Howes, prominent Washingtonians. In fact the Washington atmosphere more or less surrounds them all, the Howes, the Wadsworths and the Means. All are intimately concerned in Washington's social and official doings.

KIND DEEDS AND THE PHILANTHROPIC GESTURE OCCUPY no little of smartest society's days. Miss Betty Beal, Jr., daughter of the Boylston Beals, otherwise known as Miss Elizabeth, makes opportunity in the Summer's social scheme to serve her pet good works. She is having a children's party, down at the North Shore, for some of the protegees of the Junior Division of the M. S. P. C. Winter or Summer, Spring or Autumn, the society's helpful work goes on unceasingly, a work to which many a smart matron is devoted heart and soul.

SOMETHING BIG IS IN THE WIND FOR THE SOCIETY'S Autumn schedule. And so home from Europe comes Mrs. Howard Seabury, to assume definitely the reins of leadership which recently passed to her from Mrs. John Hallowell's hands. The Seaburys went over in the early Summer wave of travel, Mr. and Mrs. Seabury and their daughter, Miss Martha Seabury, and are just about to arrive on this side again.

DOWN AT THE NAHANT DORY CLUB LAST EVENING A REAL old fashioned clambake interested the Nahant colony. Prepared according to the tried and true rules, the succulent clam, the delicious lobster, and corn roasted on the ear to a delectable fragrance delighted the Dory Club set. The Club house that perches on the shore nearby the home of Mrs. Curtis Guild is important in the Nahant social scheme out of all proportion to its size.

THIS AFTERNOON, "TEA" SERVED BY A GRACIOUS MATRON, brings the members clubward. Weekly teas are pleasant occasions, and this afternoon's is made specially so with Mrs. Lothrop Motley behind the steaming urn. Mrs. Samuel Hammond, whose handsome daughter, Miss Susan Hammond, is a Nahant skipper without a peer in the "Star" class, arranges the teas and the entire colony—literally—partakes.

MRS. FRANK C. PAINE'S PARTY FOR THE DINNER DANCE AT the Nahant Club runs into numbers. Mrs. Paine is having nearly thirty people for the Saturday evening festivity, at which Mrs. Motley entertain a dozen intimates and the Arnold W. Hunnewells are hosts to a similar number. Nahant's season will move on in its accustomed way well into September before many of the cottage colony even begin to think of turning townward.

MATTAPAN PATIENTS SEE NEW MENJOU FILM

The last of the week's showing of Adolphe Menjou's new comedy, Service for Ladies," given under the joint auspices of the Boston Evening American and the Metropolitan Theatre, took place last night when the film was brought to the Boston Sanatorium in Mattapan and shown to some 300 patients.

The American-Metropolitan entertainment, incidently, marked the fiftieth time a picture has been shown to shut-ins in various institutions about Boston during the last year and a half.

"Service for Ladies" will be shown to the Boston public for the first time today at the theatre. During the last week the comedy was also shown at the Chelsea Naval Hospital and at the Veterans' Hospital in West Roxbury.

ILLUMINATION CONTEST ON SOUTH SHORE TONIGHT

Passenger boats with gaily waving searchlights, fireworks displays of unusual brilliance and islands turned into miniature Vesuvius volcanos by flaming lights, will feature the annual "Midnight Sun" competition along the whole South Shore of Boston's coastline tonight.

Fireworks will be set off at 9 o'clock at Windmill Point. An opening burst of aerial bombs will be the general signal for the lighting of flares and torches all along the coastline. The mainland will be freckled with red lights. All the islands in the harbor will glow with green torchlights. The towns cooperating in the community illumination contest are Hull, Hingham, North Weymouth and Quincy.

MISS HENSHAW WEDS TODAY AT NAHANT

A wedding of interest to Boston, Brookline and North Shore society circles, will be that today of Miss Frances Margaret Henshaw, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Charles S. Henshaw of Brookline and Nahant, and Loren Clifford White of Salina, Kan., a graduate of Bowdoin College, '24.

The ceremony will be performed in the Nahant church on Clifton street, by the Rev. Edward Tillotson of Swampscott, followed by a reception in the home of the bride's parents, Phillips road, Nahant. The couple will make their home at Chestnut Hill Manor after October first.

BRIDE'S ATTENDANT.

Miss Henshaw will be given in marriage by her father, one of the pioneer automobile dealers in New England. The maid of honor will be Miss Priscilla Alden Henshaw of Brookline and Nahant, while the bridesmaids will be Miss Dorothy Eleanor White, sister of the groom, of Salina, Kan.; Mrs. Malcolm Bruce Lees of Winchester, Miss Dorothy Grace Ramsey, of Brookline; Miss Constance Weatherbee Ramsey of Brookline, Miss Millicent Boyle Kingsley of Belmont, and Miss Frances Etta Preble of Cambridge.

The best man will be Harold Fessenden Nazro of Arlington, and the ushers will be Malcolm Bruce Lees of Winchester, Gordon Stanley Henshaw of Brookline and Nahant, brother of the bride; Raymond D Nunan of Swampscott, and A. A. Johnson of Brookline. The organist at the church will be W. B. Sache of Winchester.

HER BRIDAL GOWN.

Miss Henshaw's bridal gown is of old lace and tulle, the veil of tulle being worn with a lace cap, and she will carry lillies of the valley and pink orchids. The bridesmaids will be gowned in old-fashioned dresses of rose taffeta, and will wear picture hats with blue velvet streamers. They will carry pink and rose gladiolus with blue larkspur. The maid of honor will be gowned in blue.

The engagement of the couple was announced about a year ago. The bridegroom's father, Cyrus E. White, was a member of the Kansas State Legislature for several years, and during the World War served on a special Farm Labor Commission in consultation with the War President, Woodrow Wilson.

Grange's 'Girl' Gets Divorce

Los Angeles, Aug. 20, (INS).—Mrs. Clarice Taylor, whose husband, a year ago, accused her of becoming infatuated with "Red" Grange, gridiron hero, has obtained a divorce from Charles A. Taylor wealthy oil well supply dealer.

MORE CRUISERS COOLIDGE PLAN

Rapid City, S. D., Aug. 20 (A.P.).—America's naval program provides for more cruisers, but just how many has not been decided by President Coolidge, who will recommend a new building program to Congress at the coming session.

The administration favored an authorization last session for ten cruisers, and it is expected Mr. Coolidge will go at least this far in next year's program.

Preparations went forward today for the trip to Yellowstone National Park, which will be begun probably tomorrow. Plans for the trip have been guarded carefully by the President.

U. S. LAUNCHES PRICE PROBE

Washington, Aug. 20 (A.P.).—The Federal Trade Commission announced today that in the next few months it will conduct an investigation into methods used in quoting and charging prices the consuming public must pay for necessary commodities.

The commission pointed out that "numerous companies who distribute their products in various States of the Union are quoting prices in which no allowance is made for difference in transportation costs in widely separated markets."

Others, it was said, add to market prices at certain basic points, the transportation charges to the locality of the consumer, while others quote a uniform price at the factory, adding to this the freight charges to the consuming point.

The purpose of the investigation was to determine what constitutes fair practice under these methods and it was expected that information of value to business and industry would be obtained.

SPECIAL MUSIC AT ST. PAUL'S TOMORROW

At St. Paul's Cathedral tomorrow evening at 7:30 o'clock Paul H. Brown, 'cellist, will play Schubert's "Ave Maria" and Handel's "Largo." The choir will sing "O Rest in the Lord" (Mendelssohn), with cello obligato by Mr. Brown. The choir also will sing "Hail, Gladdening Light" (Martin), with trumpet obligato by Walter M. Smith.

The Rev. Edward T. Sullivan's subject at the 11 o'clock service will be "The Malady and Remedy of the Drooping Spirit." Dr. Sullivan's subject at the 7:30 service will be "Changed Lives—the Credentials of the Christian Religion."

At the sunset service on the porch of the cathedral at 7 o'clock, the choir will sing an unaccompanied anthem, in addition to the hymns, under the leadership of Leland A. Arnold, choirmaster and organist of Trinity Church, Newton Centre, who is in charge of the music at the cathedral during the Summer.

THE LIFE OF THOMAS A. EDISON

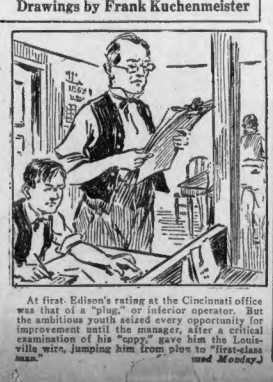
(Authorized by Mr. Edison.)

Text by Arthur J. Palmer
Drawings by Frank Kuchenmeister

Forced to leave Canada, Edison roamed over the Middle West in search of employment. He traveled from Adrian, Mich., to Detroit, thence to New Orleans via Indianapolis, Cincinnati, Louisville and Memphis. The map shows some of the territory covered in five years. Such an experience would have wrecked a less sturdy character.

One of Edison's ingenious applications of the telegraph batteries was his "rat-paralizer." It consisted of two plates connected to the main battery and insulated from each other. When a rat touched one plate with his forefeet and the other with his hind he completed the circuit and departed this life.

A remarkable instance of the mechanical manner in which a veteran operator took news occurred while Edison was in Cincinnati. An excited crowd was in the streets. A messenger boy rushed in shouting, "Lincoln's shot!" An operator had taken the message so perfunctorily he had not even realized its significance.



At first Edison's rating at the Cincinnati office was that of a "plug," or inferior operator. But the ambitious youth seized every opportunity for improvement until the manager, after a critical examination of his "copy," gave him the Louisville wire, jumping him from plus to "first-class man."

MAD CRIES HEARD IN PRISON

They know I never killed a man. I never would kill a man."

Then would come the softer voices of Sacco and Madeiros in their attempt to quiet their death-house mate.

The guards made no attempt to stop Vanzetti's ravings. Occupants of the death-house are in many ways privileged characters. Of course the place is quite apart from the main prison, and, nobody in the latter was disturbed by Vanzetti's outburst.

It was Madeiros who finally raised his voice in objection, the New Bedford man curtly asking Vanzetti if he intended letting the others get some rest. But this, apparently, had no more effect than did the more kindly remonstrances of Sacco.

It was a very different night in the death-house from the last previous one spent by the three near the little door through which the latter was disturbed by Vanzetti's outburst.

It was Madeiros who finally raised his voice in objection, the New Bedford man curtly asking Vanzetti if he intended letting the others get some rest. But this, apparently, had no more effect than did the more kindly remonstrances of Sacco.

It was a very different night in the death-house from the last previous one spent by the three near the little door through which the latter was disturbed by Vanzetti's outburst.

On that night, after they had resigned themselves to death, the men had received word of the respite granted them by Governor Fuller and were almost deliriously happy, laughing, singing, and patently hopeful that it meant life for two of them.

The shriekings of Vanzetti could be so plainly heard that they got on the nerves of the policemen on guard just outside the door of the death-house.

Even the word given him by his guards that his sister, Luigia, would visit him today did not calm the man when Sacco reminded him several times of the visit.

Today the whole police force of Boston goes on 24-hour duty. The police guard at the prison is already increased, and will be further increased today. The riot squad is marshaled, all their weapons freshly oiled and cleaned, and they will be stationed at or near the prison.

Friends of Sacco Find New Hope in Sargent

Sympathizers with Sacco and Vanzetti saw new hope today in the reported attitude of John Sargent, attorney-general of the United States, who listened to two representatives of the Citizens' National Sacco-Vanzetti Committee in a three-hour conference at his home in Ludlow, Vt.

The two representatives were Francis Fisher Kane, former U. S. district attorney for Pennsylvania, and Arthur Garfield Hays of New York lawyer. They asked Federal intervention. Hayes wired the following report to the committee at its local headquarters:

"Attorney-General Sargent declared at the end of our three-hour session that it was the first time that the case has ever been presented to him for official action.

"He said it was the first time he ever understood the relation of the Federal government through the United States Department of Justice of which he is the head to the Sacco-Vanzetti case.

"Mr. Sargent displayed much concern and has taken the matter under advisement. He assured Mr. Kane and myself that he will endeavor to reach a decision promptly."

Washington, Aug. 20 (A.P.)—While in Washington to file a petition in the Sacco case today, Attorney M. A. Musmanno called on acting Attorney General Farnum to discuss the case.

The Department of Justice has "absolutely nothing of any materiality bearing on the murder case," Farnum said he told the attorney. He reiterated the declaration of Attorney-General Sargent that the case was entirely in the hands of the authorities of Massachusetts.

"The Department of Justice has no more jurisdiction or connection with the Sacco-Vanzetti case than it has with the Ruth Snyder-Judd Gray case," Mr. Farnum declared. The charge has been made by persons working on behalf of Sacco and Vanzetti that the federal files contained evidence of a conspiracy between the Department of Justice and the State of Massachusetts to "frame" the radicals.

New York Sacco Adherents Arrested Defying Police

SACCO SYMPATHIZERS NOT ALLOWED TO PICKET STATE HOUSE

These three Sacco "death marchers" are from the "New York intelligentsia." They found Boston police obdurate when they attempted to defy orders and picket the State House. Miss Merrell is a Vassar graduate of 1924; Hibben says he is a captain in the 391st field artillery, N. Y. N. G.; Miss Porter is of the New York Sacco-Vanzetti committee.

PRECEDENT FOR SACCO STAY IN U. S. COURT

Washington, Aug. 20 (A.P.)—Counsel for Sacco and Vanzetti in asking a review by the Supreme Court have the benefit of recent action by Justice Holmes in another capital crime case and a precedent in asking a stay of execution.

On July 15, after Justice Brandeis had granted a temporary stay in the cases of Nathan Bard and Bunyan Fleming, two negroes sentenced to death in Kentucky for criminal assault, counsel for the condemned men obtained from Justice Holmes a stay of execution until the Supreme Court could pass upon a petition for review, which the justice was assured would be filed. Up to date no such petition has been filed, although a stay of execution was granted.

In the Kentucky case, as in that of Sacco and Vanzetti, it was claimed that the convicted men had not received a fair trial as guaranteed by the fourteenth amendment, in that the populace was excited and prejudiced and that the judgment of the jury was affected by local sentiment.

Justice Holmes in acting in the Kentucky case stated that he granted a stay of execution "because human lives are involved, and if I am wrong (in his conclusion that technically no issues were presented justifying a review by the Supreme Court) would be sacrificed by my mistake."

Mrs. Codman Charges Thayer With Prejudice

Mrs. John S. Codman, wealthy Sacco-Vanzetti sympathizer, today called at the State House and left for Governor Fuller a statement signed by four other women and her self, in which they reiterated charges of prejudice against Judge Webster Thayer.

The statement, signed by Mrs. Glendower Evans, Brookline; Mrs. Jessica L. Henderson, Wayland; Mrs. John S. Codman, Boston; Mrs. John G. Jack, E. Walpole, and Mrs. Virginia A. MacMechan, Boston, read:

"At the hearing on the Sacco-Vanzetti case before the Supreme Court, the point was made by the attorney-general that there was no evidence that during the trial prejudice was shown by Judge Thayer before the jury. We, the undersigned, having been present day after day at the trial, wish to testify that we were again and again shocked by the obvious animosity displayed by Judge Thayer toward Mr. Moore, one of counsel for the defense."

Sees Reds Using Sacco Case to Cow U. S.

Marinette, Wis., Aug. 20 (A.P.).—Rather than have the courts fit their procedure so as to least offend radicals, Ferre C. Watkins, commander of the Illinois Department, American Legion, believes "it were better for the manhood of America, embattled and fearless, to stand in defense of American institutions with the unsheathed bayonet and the machine gun to protect hem if need be."

Radicalism, he asserted, in addressing the Wisconsin Legion today, has challenged those institutions and the Legion must be found firmly back of every movement to defend them.

"The world has seen ruddely awakened recently and America's self-conceited complacency has disappeared. Radicalism, varying from the red flag to the internationalistic slogan, has aligned itself with Sacco and Vanzetti.

"The bomb and dynamite have sought to take the place of the hooks of the law. The red flag has sought to replace the Stars and Stripes, and violence, intimidation and force have sought to cow and conquer the courts and the processes of justice.

"The present radical crisis is a challenge to American institutions and those who believe in this government, and must be met firmly and fearlessly by an awakened public and its officials, if we are to continue under this government with any hope for its future."

RIOTS, STRIKES MARK RECEIPT OF SACCO NEWS

By Associated Press

Sympathizers of Nicola Sacco and Bartolomeo Vanzetti in foreign countries, who were aroused a fortnight ago by Governor Fuller's decision not to pardon the condemned men or grant a new trial, have been stirred anew by the Massachusetts Supreme Court's rejection of their appeal.

In Berlin a crowd of Communists gathered for a demonstration before the American embassy and the police had to use blackjacks to disperse them. At three Communist demonstrations in other parts of the city resolutions were adopted demanding the immediate release of the two men.

Posters were displayed by the Communists accusing the German bourgeoisie of playing the game of "American murder-justice."

They also urge the German proletariat to "strike a blow" for the condemned men. A number of the newspapers condemned the court's decision in no uncertain language.

GUARD U. S. PROPERTY.

Guards about the American Embassy in Paris were augmented to permit uncurbed indicting by sympathizers. Italian and Spanish Embassies are also heavily guarded and all mail received at the three buildings is undergoing a minute examination.

CALLS IT "MURDER."

There is bitter comment on the decision by Paris papers which have radical tendencies. Typical of the comment is the remark of Le Soir, "It is not justice, but just plain murder."

At the largest hall in Geneva 2,000 persons gave approval to a message to Boston demanding the lives of Sacco and Vanzetti. They voted to name a committee to carry on propaganda for boycotting American products, especially films.

Newspapers of all political affiliations in London express regret over the decision of the Massachusetts court. The Labor-ite Daily Herald quotes H. G. Wells as saying:

"The deliberate murder of Sacco and Vanzetti will be the blackest crime in history."

PRIEST VISITS DOOMED TRIO

Rev. Michael J. Murphy, Catholic chaplain of the prison, paid a visit to Sacco, Vanzetti and Madeiros in the death house, immediately after Vanzetti's sister left today. He spent about 15 minutes taking with each of the men.

Nothing was said about religion, although Father Murphy will visit the condemned men again tomorrow and Monday. He said he found the men in good spirits, especially Vanzetti who had been cheered by the visit of his sister.

The chaplain said Vanzetti was warm in his praise of Warden Hendry for allowing him to leave his cell that he might greet his sister.

Each of the men shook hands with Father Murphy, and when he left, asked him to call again. It was the first visit of the chaplain to the death house in some time.

Moderico told Father Murphy he expected another visit from his mother tomorrow or Monday.

Plan New General Sacco Strike in Sweden

Stockholm, Aug. 20 (A.P.)—The Sacco-Vanzetti defense committee of Sweden has renewed agitation for a general strike following rejection by the Massachusetts Supreme Court of the plea for Sacco and Vanzetti.

The central board of the National Federation of Labor, however, has reiterated its warning that any such strike would violate the contract between Swedish employers and labor. It also is recalled that Premier Ekman of Sweden already has informed a Sacco-Vanzetti deputation that the Swedish government cannot in any way interfere with the administration of law in another country.

LEWIS HELD AT PEABODY

Peabody, Aug. 20 (A.P.).—Alfred Baker Lewis, Boston Socialist, who was arrested here last night on a charge of obstructing the public streets when he tried to address a large crowd with regard to the Sacco-Vanzetti case, pleaded not guilty in the District Court today.

The case was continued until next Tuesday and he was released under $100 bonds.

Bill for Trial by Court of 3 Grows Out of Sacco Case

Aiming to end all long-drawn-out court battles, such as the Sacco-Vanzetti case, and to expedite trial in capital cases, Representative Francis X. Coyne of Dorchester today filed the following bill at the State House:

"Section 1—In all capital cases where the defendant does not waive his rights to trial by a jury, there shall preside at said trial three justices. One of these shall be a justice of the Superior Court, and two of whom shall be justices of the Supreme Court of the Commonwealth.

"Section 2—When objections and exceptions are raised by either party the presiding justice shall then make a ruling on the objections raised, and this ruling shall be final.

"Section 3—This act shall only apply to those on trial charged with capital crimes.

"Section 4—This act shall take effect upon its passage."

Representative Coyne, in commenting upon his bill, said the one blot upon the Commonwealth has been the fact that capital cases have been allowed to drag too long.

Three Buildings Blown Up by Bombs in Chicago

Chicago, Aug. 20 (I.N.S.)—Three buildings were partly wrecked here today in bomb blasts. Labor trouble, a beer war and business rivalry were blamed. No one was injured. Damage was estimated at $3,000.

KLAN PROTESTS DELAY IN SACCO EXECUTION

Binghamton, N. Y., Aug. 20 (A.P.). A Ku Klux Klan demonstration, with its accompaniment of blazing crosses, was held near the city to protest against delay in executing Sacco and Vanzetti, in Boston.

Members in full regalia, with pistols and filled cartridge belts, guarded the location in which the demonstration was held. There was no disorder.

Paris Police On Guard Against Sacco Outbreaks

Paris, Aug. 20 (A.P.).—Measures were being taken by the police today to deal with radical outbursts as a consequence of rejection by the Massachusetts Supreme Court of the appeal in behalf of the condemned men.

It was announced that no parades or meetings in the public streets would be permitted.

VANZETTI AND SISTER MEET IN PRISON

without number in the years that have gone, but never was a sight of such pathos witnessed as today.

It was the first time brother and sister had met since Bartolomeo Vanzetti, a sturdy, ambitious youth set forth from Italy 19 years ago, to make his way in the New World.

For the first time in the history of Charlestown Prison the rules of the death house were broken and a prisoner awaiting execution was removed from his cell to meet one of his kin in close embrace.

There is a white line painted on the floor of the death cell several feet from the row of closely barred cells in which condemned prisoners spend their last hours. Relatives are never permitted to cross this line. A hasty handclasp through the cell bars is all the prison regulations permit.

But today Warden Hendry broke this rule. He realized that brother and sister had not met for nineteen years—he knew that the sister, at the eleventh hour, had traveled a third of the way round the world to give a sister's farewell consolation to a man who stands at the brink of the grave.

IN BROTHER'S ARMS

When the sister arrived at the State Prison, accompanied by Mrs. Rose Sacco, wife of the man who will go to the chair with Vanzetti, Warden Hendry himself was in waiting.

Vanzetti, meantime, had been taken from his cell and was placed in a chair in the corridor in front of the three death-house cells. Another chair was at his side.

Supported by Mrs. Sacco and the warden, the sister passed into the death chamber. She caught one glimpse of the seated form. Then she ran forward, arms outstretched, and the prisoner, on his feet in an instant, held the slightly, sobbing form close to him.

The warden and Mrs. Sacco stood back. For a full moment brother and sister remained in fond embrace, with only the sister sobbing into the wool "Paris."

As they finally drew apart, Miss Vanzetti staggered and was about to fall to the floor, but collapse when Warden Hendry rushed to her side and supported her. Mrs. Sacco secured a cup of water and this restored the woman somewhat.

TALK FOR AN HOUR

Then for an hour brother and sister sat side by side and talked. Vanzetti, throughout this time, caressed the hand of his sister. From time to time he would press one of the hands to his lips. A number of times he fondly caressed her hair on the cheek.

Finally Hendry left the death-house and returned to his office, but two guards remained with the two prisoners in the small, well-lighted room.

For an hour Miss Vanzetti was permitted to be with her brother. They conversed in low tones in the Italian tongue.

Not once did the sister ask her brother to turn back to the church of his boyhood during his last hours.

They talked of Italy—of their brothers and sisters. They recalled incidents that occurred when they were children together. Only infrequently did they speak of the events that have occurred since the South Braintree crime, seven years ago, and which has brought the brother to the shadow of the electric chair.

ON VERGE OF COLLAPSE

Finally, the sister was led from the death house. Again she was on the verge of collapse. She was placed in an automobile and returned to the Believe Ward, where she is stopping.

The sister will return to the death house again tomorrow. She will also be allowed to visit her brother again on Monday—but this will be the last by the last, for after midnight, Monday, the law will exact the penalty of death upon the men who, we say, Sacco and Vanzetti are guilty.

Members of the defense committee, who accompanied Miss Vanzetti to the death house, declared that the sister would make no effort to have her brother see a priest and seek the solace of the church.

"She has only respect for her brother's views on religion, and she will not endeavor to change these views," said Attiio Pellegrini, treasurer of the Sacco-Vanzetti defense committee, who was with the party that visited the prison.

Miss Vanzetti, visibly affected by her trying visit to the death house, returned to the Sacco-Vanzetti defense headquarters on Hanover street this afternoon.

For a time it was necessary for her to rest at the headquarters before she took up with members of the committee the steps that still remain to be taken in a final effort to save her brother's life. She refused to talk to newspaper reporters.

Bar Consul From Prison in Try to Save Madeiros

In an eleventh-hour attempt to save Celestino Madeiros from the electric chair Joseph Linhares, Portuguese Consul, today went to the State prison to intervier the doomed man.

Warden Hendry explained that he was unable to allow the Consul to see Madeiros as he was not counsel for the death house inmate. Linhares has been busy for the past few days in an attempt to have Madeiros examined for his mentality with the view of having him pregnounced insane.

On the warden's decision he returned to his office, but was unable to get in touch with the lawyer who is supposed to represent Madeiros. The lawyer is out of town for the week-end and Linhares said the chances of getting action in Madeiros' case were slim.

GIRL AGAIN IN JAIL AS SACCO RIOT LEADER

Chicago, Aug. 20 (A.P.)—Still crusading for "the new freedom," 23-year-old Aurora D'Angelo today found herself back in jail for soapbox oratory in behalf of Sacco and Vanzetti.

The fiery young high school girl, who only a week ago went to a cell for leading a riotous protest parade against the execution of the condemned men, was arrested last night a moment after she ascended a soap box, before a crowd of sympathizers, and launched a tirade against society.

Shouting defiance, the young girl flung at the officers: "You coppers are big bums!" When a hand clasped her arm she cried: "You never work, but I do"

"What is your occupation?" the policeman asked.

"I have no occupation," she hurled back.

And then, with 18 other persons, 8 of them women, she again went to jail, as the police nipped in the bud a growing radical demonstration.

The disturbances began when a hall which had been rented for a meeting was closed to the sympathizers, fomenting numerous hall meetings in the neighborhood. It was at one of these that Aurora was exhorting when interrupted by officers.

The police again were forced to resort to tear bombs to disperse the crowds. Aside from the protest meeting the only other disturbance reported in Chicago was a bomb explosion, attributed to Sacco-Vanzetti sympathizers, in a loop employment bureau. The damage was slight.

Police were prepared for the situation, as it might develop, with 6,000 men held in reserve.

POLICE ARSENAL MOVED TO HEADQUARTERS

The arsenal of the Boston police department, consisting of more than 400 rifles, sub-machine guns, automatic rifles, shot-guns and riot guns was today moved from the Back Bay station on Boylston street, to the immense vault in the drill master's quarters at police headquarters on Berkley street.

The Boylston street station is near the railroad and it was found that dirt sifted through the gun cases, necessitating constant cleaning of the weapons. The vault at headquarters is air-tight and the entire arsenal was set up there. Three armorers, working in eight hour shifts, have charge of the weapons and they are available for use instantly, at any hour of the day or night.

NAB 14 STATE HOUSE PICKETS ON PARADE

Fourteen Sacco-Vanzetti sympathizers, the majority from New York, armed with placards, staged a "death march" in front of the State House today and were arrested for assembling and loitering.

While a crowd of several hundred persons looked on police inspectors placed the marchers under arrest after warning them that they were violating a city ordinance.

No disorders attended the arrests, but large numbers of police were held in reserve, with a special detail of thirty in the west wing of the State House, which was closed to the public.

Those arrested were booked as follows:

Captain Paxton Hibben, 391st Field Artillery, New York.

Mrs. Clarina Michaelson, No. 22 Banks street, New York.

Elizabeth Merrell, No. 40 Horatio street, New York.

Powers Hapgood, Indianapolis.

George Kraska, No. 13 Park avenue, Winthrop.

Molly Kraska, his wife.

John Dos Passos, New York author.

Miss Delafield Day, No. 23 Perry street, New York.

Miss Katherine Anne Porter, No. 27 Banks street, New York.

James Rorty, Westport, Ct.

Abraham Leykowitz, Lynn.

Joseph Louck, Chambers street, Boston.

Frank Silva, No. 42 Melville avenue, Dorchester.

David Sacruk, No. 81 Charles street, Boston.

The 14 marchers mounted into a bus in front of the Beach street headquarters and rode to the Common.

There they left the bus and walked across the Common, emerging from the steps near the Shaw monument. Crossing the street, led by Captain Hibben, they began their march on the curbing, up and down in front of the State House.

The picketers were bailed a short time after their arrest by Edward H. James, Beacon Hill sympathizer with Sacco and Vanzetti, who recently paid a $75 fine himself for participating in a similar demonstration.

James put up a bank book as security, the police demanding $25 bail for each of the fourteen. As the formalities were being concluded, Mary Donovan of the Sacco-Vanzetti defence committee arrived armed with cash prepared to rescue the marchers.

SACCO FRIEND BARRED BY SONS OF ITALY

Springfield, Aug. 20 (A.P.)—A stir was created at the State convention of the Sons of Italy in America here today when Mrs. Mary Pulvirenti of this city, long active in radical and communistic affairs in this vicinity, invaded the convention hall auditorium and began to read a long statement concerning the Sacco-Vanzetti case.

Delegates at once surrounded her and warned her to desist, but she paid no attention to them and continued. Word was then sent to police headquarters and six police at once went to the hall and escorted Mrs. Pulvirenti out.

NEW SACCO COUNSEL RAPS JUDGE THAYER

"Judge Thayer showed his prejudice throughout the trial of Sacco and Vanzetti and I have no doubt it influenced the jury, although the jurors may have been unaware of it at the time," said Frederick Schuyler Jackson, former attorney-general of New York, who joined defense counsel today. Jackson said he came to Boston at the invitation of the Citizens' National Committee for Sacco and Vanzetti.

"I disagree with both the slovenly reasoning and the report of his advisory board," he said.

100 NEW YORK SACCO PICKETS SAIL FOR HUB

New York, Aug. 20 (A.P.).—One hundred local sympathizers of Sacco and Vanzetti will sail tonight for Boston, where they expect to picket the State House in Boston and the State prison in Charlestown, it was announced by Rose Baron of the Sacco-Vanzetti committee.

If you have capital to invest, let Greater Boston people know about it through a Classified Ad in the Boston American. Call LIberty 4000. Ask for an Ad-Taker.

The Hat Trick At Home

Ah, the wise counsel of the elders! In "The Baby Cyclone" at the Hollis, William Morris, playing a middle-aged husband, offers the lyro benedict, Spencer Tracy, this sage advice: "Never argue with your wife. At her first scream, just grab your hat—and out!"

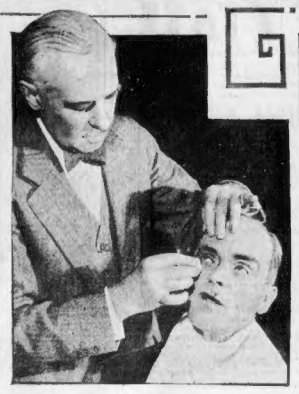
STAGE AND SCREEN

The Amiable Repeater

While in jail as a martyr for his political principles, Louis Simon, in "Bye, Bye, Bonnie" at the Wilbur, announces his candidacy for Congress. "Hooray!" shouts one hardened malefactor. And then in a hoarse, confidential whisper to Mr. Simon, "you'll get my votes."

PRESENT HALF SPEED VOGUE IN DRAMA SOON TO GIVE WAY TO FULL STEAM AHEAD

NEW GARTER FAD is introduced in "Half a Widow" at the Shubert. Nan Travaline is the girl who believes in protection, and Milton Wallace is the boy who sees the point.



A BLACK EYE is the painful portion of Grant Mitchell in "The Baby Cyclone" at the Hollis. He acquires it by allowing his visage to get in the way of a flying fist. "Most awkward," murmurs the doctor (John Doyle).

"SERVICE FOR LADIES" is the newest film adventure of the sleek Adolphe Menjou at the Metropolitan. He is a headwaiter and Kathryn Carver is his favorite and favored customer.

NO CHIN FROM THE ARMY is acceptable to Molly O'Day, not even from "Hard Boiled Haggerty" (Olympia and Scollay). But the chin belongs to Milton Sills and he always gets his way—in the movies.

THIS GRIPPING SCENE takes place in "Rain" at the Gayety. Jerrold Ryce is the miscreant missionary and Leona Earl is the famous Sadie Thompson, condemned, converted and condemned again.

NEW MYSTERY PLAY OPENS PLYMOUTH

One of the interesting theatrical attractions of the new season is "Secret Service Smith," a detective play by Lincoln Osborn dramatized from "The Black Magician," a widely read story by R. T. M. Scott.

This attraction will be seen at the Plymouth for two weeks beginning Monday night.

Ramsey Wallace, one of Broadway's favorite actors, will be seen in the star role and, incidentally, is the managerial sponsor for the play.

It is said that Mr. Osborn's dramatization follows the story very closely. There are revealed in its pages a rich millionaire and his impressionable wife, a lovable street urchin who thinks "Secret Service Smith" is the center of the universe, a beautiful young secretary who sometimes thinks the same way, an arch-charlatan and attendant crooks, corpses and apparitions enough to make a very exciting cast of characters.

In the development of the story the famous detective is confronted with one of the most baffling mysteries of his exciting career, which he solves in his usual and brilliant manner.

Mr. Wallace will be seen as "Secret Service Smith" and will be surrounded with an exceptional cast, including Norma Phillips, George Probert, Dean Borup, Charles Horn, E. Lester Paul, John Brummell, Harriett Ross, Carl Reed, Edmund Norris, Earl McLellan, Katherine Moore, Jerry Austin, Charles Gibney, Charles Febre and Anita Lugary.

Jed Harris at 27 Produces the Big Hit, "Broadway"

Early in 1923 Jed Harris threw a cover over his typewriter in the office of a theatrical publicist in New York and announced that he was "through." He collected the salary that was due him. It represented his total assets, as money goes.

"I'm going to be a producer," he said.

For three years the going was tough, but finally came September, 1926, as they say in motion pictures, and the sign over the Broadhurst Theatre read: "Jed Harris presents Broadway." At twenty-seven this young man, then, had the hit of the year. He could even afford a yacht!

The hardest-boiled of the critics say that "Broadway" will play for two full years in New York. A company has just finished a run of thirty-five weeks in London, and a third company is in its nineteenth week in Detroit. A special company of "Broadway" opens in Boston at the Plymouth on Labor Day.

HOWARD OPENS

The burlesque season at the Old Howard will resume Monday. The attraction is Harry Fields and his "Sugar Babies" revue. Pictures and vaudeville will also be shown.

Looking Ahead

SEPTEMBER 5—
Eddie Dowling in "Honeymoon Lane" at the Tremont.
"Broadway" at the Plymouth.
Helen Ford in "Peggy Ann" at the Majestic.
George M. Cohan's "The Merry Malones" at the Colonial.
"My Princess" at the Shubert.

SEPTEMBER 12—
"The Barker" at the Hollis
"Bonita" at the Majestic.

SEPTEMBER 27—
Jimmie Cooper's "Black and White" revue at Waldron's Casino.

Very Mysterious

NORMA PHILLIPS has a leading role in "Secret Service Smith," coming Monday to the Plymouth.

WAR THRILLS FOR ACTOR

J. Newton Jones, who plays one of the natives in Lewis Talbot's presentation of "Hain" at the Gayety, will never forget his experiences in the World War.

Born in Llandudno, North Wales, and educated in the Liverpool National College, Jones enlisted in the British navy and was assigned to the battleship Formidable.

On January 1, 1915, a torpedo struck that craft, throwing the entire crew into the water. Jones drifted for two hours on a spar until finally picked up by one of the three open boats that had managed to get clear of the sinking vessel.

LANGDON WAS 'PROPS' BOY AT HOME

Harry Langdon in "His First Flame," at the Keith-Albee Boston, can vouch for the truth of the saying that there is no royal road to fame and riches.

Starting his career as "prop boy" in a small theatre in Council Bluffs, Iowa, he often dreamed of the time when he might have the opportunity of appearing before the footlights. His spare time in those days was spent in committing to memory the lines of the heroes and villains of the play which occupied the stage where he worked. One day an actor was taken ill and Harry was given his first chance.

Harry Langdon

The part was not a comedy one. But from the minute the funny little chap walked on the stage, with his turned up mouth and solemn eyes, the house rocked with laughter. He walked on and off, and carried the show on his shoulders.

Then he tried out as a monologist in amateur nights in Omaha theatres. Then came trips around the country with medicine shows, and barnstorming tours with road shows. Then the small time vaudeville houses, and finally the bright lights of Broadway. He starred on the Keith-Albee and Orpheum circuit in solemn little acts which were excruciatingly funny. His first was called "Johnny's First Car."

BOWDOIN SQUARE

Los Sambers, a team of Spanish gymnasts, is the main feature at Norumbega Park next week. There are also pictures and vaudeville in the open air theatre, and various midway amusements.

FILM FARE FOR NEW WEEK

METROPOLITAN—Adolphe Menjou in "Service for Ladies" (first run), filmed from an original screen story by Ernest Vadja. A Parisian headwaiter takes a vacation, poses as a fine gentleman, gets away with it and finally marries "into money." Others in the cast are Kathryn Carver, Charles Lane and Lawrence Grant. Harry D'Arrast directed. A Paramount picture. On stage, Jack Partington's "Banjomania," song and dance presentation with the Thompson Sisters, Margaret Ball, singers, dancers and the Metropolitan stage band.

LOEW'S STATE—Norma Shearer in "After Midnight" (first run), adapted from an original screen story by Monta Bell who also directed. Adventures of two sisters, one a cigarette girl of a philosophical turn of mind; the other an irresponsible chorus girl who lives for the moment. Others in the cast are Gwen Lee, Lawrence Gray and Eddie Sturgis. A Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer picture. On stage, Isham Jones and band.

* * *

LOEW'S ORPHEUM—Jackie Coogan in "The Bugle Call," adapted from the story by Gardner Sullivan. Military drama of the Indian wars of the old West. The cast includes Claire Windsor, Herbert Rawlinson, Tom O'Brien and Sarah Padden. Edward Sedgwick directed. A Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer picture. Also vaudeville.

* * *

OLYMPIA AND SCOLLAY—Milton Sills in "Hard Boiled Haggerty" (first run), adapted from the story by Elliott White Springs. War drama about a daring aviator who cares nothing about rules and regulations. The cast includes Molly O'Day, Arthur Stone, Mitchell Lewis, Yola D'Avril and George Fawcett. Charles Brabin directed. A First National picture. Also vaudeville.

MODERN AND BEACON—Sid Chaplin in "The Missing Link", (second week), adapted from the story by Charles Reisner, who also directed. Merry farce comedy of jungle adventures. The cast includes Ruth Hiatt and Tom McGuire. A Warner Brothers picture. Also a Vitaphone program including Giacomo Rimini, tenor, and "The Revelers," popular singing artists.

* * *

NEW BOSTON—(Starting tomorrow) Harry Langdon in "His First Flame" (first run), adapted from a story by Arthur Ripley and Frank Capra. Hilarious misadventures in romance and in fire fighting. Others in the cast are Ruth Hiatt, Natalie Kingston and Dot Farley. Frank Capra directed. Mack Sennett produced. A Pathe picture. Also vaudeville.

* * *

FENWAY—(Starting today) "Metropolis," an industrial thriller, a fantasy of the future. Also Sid Chaplin in "The Better 'Ole." Starting Wednesday, Colleen Moore in "Naughty But Nice." Also Warner Baxter, Marietta Miller and Ford Sterling in "Drums of the Desert."

WANTED, NEW NAME FOR BERLY

Beryl Halley, the noted beauty who was named by Ernst Linnenkamp, Austrian artist, as America's most beautiful woman, wants to change her name.

Beryl Halley is her own name and not an assumed one, but she has become so noted for her physical perfection in revues and in supper clubs that she declares that it interferes with her progress on the stage. All that has been required of her in these places was to simply appear; and she has had no opportunity to entertain her ability as a singer and dancer.

Beryl Halley

But in "Half a Widow," the musical play at the Shubert, Miss Beryl has an opportunity to do more than display her great charm of face and form. She has an important role in this production; and all her friends declare that she should have long since taken up the more serious form of theatricals—the drama.

Nevertheless, Miss Halley still insists on changing her name.

Jackie Coogan, Growing Up, Plays Brand New Role

Jackie Coogan's new picture, "The Bugle Call," a Metro-Goldwin-Mayer production, which comes Monday to the Orpheum, shows him in a role new to his followers—that of a "near-grown-up" part. He enacts a bugle-boy in a cavalry post on the old historic Bozeman Trail in the days of Indian wars. His bugle routs an Indian horde in this thrillingly vivid tale which is based on actual history.

Bonnie Dancer

DOROTHY HUMPHREYS is the fetching specialty dancer in "Bye, Bye, Bonnie" at the Wilbur.

JOURNALIST IS PRODUCER

"Hard-Boiled Haggerty," Milton Sills' latest stellar film, showing jointly at the Olympia and Scollay next week, was produced for First National Pictures by Wid Gunning, journalist, film editor and producer. Gunning has a remarkable career as a background for his present work. He entered the newspaper game at the age of fourteen, continuing his schooling meanwhile, and by the time he reached his nineteenth year became editor of a daily newspaper in his home town, Chillicothe, Ohio.

A few years later he entered the film business in New York city

NEW HEROINE DISCOVERED BY MENJOU

Adolphe Menjou is acquiring a reputation in film circles for discovering unrecognized talent.

In his latest comedy-drama, "Service for Ladies," arriving at the Metropolitan today, Menjou introduces a new leading woman in the person of Kathryn Carver. While Miss Carver isn't exactly new to films this is her first big opportunity. According to critics who have seen her work she is achieving definite laurels for herself, indicative of the further successes so many Menjou heroines have won in the past.

Her features attracted the attention of Paramount executives several years ago and she was sought out for a role in "The Wanderer" playing Naomi. Cama other film engagements, each a definite part. Then Adolphe Menjou became interested and urged her selection as leading woman in "Service for Ladies." At his instigation a screen test was made and Miss Carver was approved by B. P. Schulberg, associate producer in executive charge of the West Coast studio, as leading woman for Adolphe's current picture.

Charles Lane and Lawrence Grant also have important roles in the production. Others in the cast are Sally Blane, Marian Ivy Harris and Lotus Thompson. H. D. D'Abbadie D'Arrast directed from an original screen story written by Ernest Vajda and adapted by Chandler Sprague.

Gray, Bank Clerk, Brought Quickly Into Films

Lawrence Gray, who plays the leading male role in Norma Shearer's new starring vehicle, "After Midnight," a Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer production, coming Monday to Loew's State, was formerly a newspaper reporter.

He began as a cub for the San Francisco Call and covered the police and water front beats. During the war he was an ensign in the United States Navy. Afterward he became a bank clerk.

He was induced by a film director, who saw him in a teller's cage, to play a role in a picture. Gray made good and was placed under contract by Famous Players. Recently he was loaned to M-G-M to play the male lead in "The Callahans and the Murphys." Because of the success of this role he was then cast as leading man for Miss Shearer.

"After Midnight" was directed by Monta Bell from his own original story.

"FAIR CO.ED"

The cast to surround Marion Davies in her new production, "The Fair Co-Ed," based on the famous George Ade musical comedy of the same name, has practically been completed. Johnnie Mack Brown, former halfback of the University of Alabama team, has been engaged for the leading male role.

WHAT SPIRITED CAMERAS SHOW IN WEEK'S GIFT FROM SHADOWLAND

LOVE AT FIRST SMITE is Lawrence Gray's condition when Norma Shearer numbs him with her trusty gaspipe in "After Midnight" at Loew's State. Yes, sir, this boy believes in going his head to his hearts.

THE BANANA THIEF is Sid Chaplin in "The Missing Link" at the Modern and Beacon. The other fellow is just Burns, of the London police force, so we will call him Bobby Burns. The banana is—well, now, what does it matter when the others are so well accounted for?

"SURELY, WE'VE MET BEFORE," murmurs Herbert Rawlinson to Claire Windsor in "The Bugle Call" (Orpheum). "Possibly," she replies, "your face is familiar, but I really cannot recall the mustache."

Film Futures

AUGUST 27—
Dolores Costello in "Heart of Maryland" at the Metropolitan.

AUGUST 28—
Harry Langdon in "The Butter and Egg Man" at the Washington Street Olympia.
Barbara Kent and Raymond Keane in "The Lone Eagle" at the Boston.

AUGUST 29—
Lew Cody and Aileen Pringle in "Adam and Evil."

SEPTEMBER 3—
Clara Bow in "Hula" at the Metropolitan.

SEPTEMBER 4—
Douglas MacLean in "Soft Cushions" at the Boston.

Won By a Knockout!

According to "Murray Hill" at the Copley, a case of love at first sight may be said to exist when the interested lady faints. In the play, Genevieve Tobin is introduced to her young man and she forthwith swoons in ecstasy. So flattered, could any gentleman resist?

STAGE AND SCREEN

Officer, Call a Cop!

The way of the new producer is sometimes highly embarrassing. Last Monday evening Wally Gluck, sponsor of "Half A Widow" at the Shubert, was sternly barred by Special Officer Caffrey of the theatre for an attempt to crash the gate on his own production!

LESSONS FOR SHRINKING VIOLETS

Advice to shy, shrinking violets in large quantities on the subject of how to be popular is offered in Colleen Moore's new starring comedy-drama, "Naughty but Nice," at the Fenway next week.

This picture depicts the tale of a freckled, bespectacled, long-haired, awkward girl from Texas, who enters a smart finishing school on the outskirts of Washington, D. C. From being the school's prize, unnoticed dumb-bell, Colleen suddenly and mysteriously becomes the most stunning girl in the place with all the most desirable town sheiks at her feet.

Colleen Moore

THE MERRY MORTICIAN

BENBIDT

ACTORS FROM ALL WALKS OF LIFE

"Why did you become an actor?" is, perhaps, the question most frequently asked of players by persons outside of the profession.

Actors come from all walks of life, many of them are born to the stage, but mostly they drift in after treading other avenues of endeavor.

Georgia Caine, with George M. Cohan's "The Baby Cyclone," at the Hollis, can claim aristocracy in her profession, having made her debut as an infant in her father's company, where she rose to be leading lady in her early teens.

No branch of Grant Mitchell's family ever trod the boards until he "went on" as an extra in Richard Mansfield's production of Julius Caesar. This event occurred in Mitchell's home town, Columbus, Ohio, where he was studying law at the time. In the light of after events the law may have lost an earnest pleader, but the stage found a brilliant star.

And William Morris, the Robert Webster of "The Baby Cyclone" cast, started on his stage career right here in Boston to afterwards become the leading man of Charles Frohman's well remembered stock company, a position Mr. Morris held for a number of seasons.

SOMERVILLE PLAYERS

Arthur A. Vianno of Somerville Players' Theatre will resume production of weekly stock on Labor Day. For the new season Frank A. McPhee, publisher of the Somerville News, has been appointed manager.

What's What With Shows Remaining

"Bye, Bye, Bonnie" at the Wilbur (third week). Frances White, Fritzi Scheff and many other pleasant people in a blithe and tuneful musical comedy.

"The Baby Cyclone" at the Hollis (second week). George M. Cohan poking fun at women who coddle dogs. A laugh every minute.

"Half A Widow" at the Shubert (second week). The World War in song and story. Lusty male chorus.

"Rain" at the Gayety (third week). Leona Earl does well by the now famous Sadie Thompson, florid lady of the tropics.

"Murray Hill" at the Copley (second week). Leslie Howard's farcical spoofing of ultra respectable spinsterhood, with the author and Genevieve Tobin for extra distinction.

PACIFIC RESCUE PLANE BELIEVED TO HAVE FALLEN INTO SEA

GRIM SILENCE FOLLOWS SOS APPEAL FOR HELP

the plane had gone into two successive tail spins. Then the plane's radio was silent.

United States destroyers and mercantile vessels answered the call for help and steamed under forced draught toward the Dallas Spirit's last known position, about 532 miles west of San Francisco.

The position of the West Sequana at midnight, Pacific Standard Time, when it sighted the flare, was given as 37 degrees, 32 minutes west longitude.

The flare was not repeated, the message from the West Sequana said. Shanghai.

After four hours' search she resumed her course.

She is a United States Shipping Board vessel fitted to carry oil. She was en route from San Francisco to sped along seeking the missing fliers—Miss Mildren Doran, John Auggie Pedlar, her pilot, Lieut. V. R. Knope, her navigator, and Jack Frost, pilot, and Gordon Scott, navigator of Hearst's Golden Eagle.

Naval radio headquarters here estimated the Dallas Spirit was about 592 nautical miles from San Francisco when it encountered trouble. This was based on location messages sent before the distress call.

Travelling along at a speed estimated at approximately 100 miles, Erwin and Eichwaldt had experienced no difficulty. Light-heartedly they careened through the air as some of their messages indicated. A few picked at random follow:

5:04 p. m.—We see a ship ahead of us. Presumably the Mana. We will go down to wave to them.

5:11 p. m.—Just saw a rum runner on the left and had a hell of a time passing like Ben-Hill.

5:37 p. m.—We are now about to have supper. Will call you again after supper.

6:05 p. m.—Please tell the gentleman who brushed our lunch that it is fine, but we can't find the toothpicks.—Bill.

7:10 p. m.—Have seen no wreckage or anything that might be either of the ones we are looking for.

Captain Erwin took the Dallas Spirit out last Tuesday as a starter in the Dole Race, but he was forced back to Oakland with a torn fuselage, caused by the ripping of the canvas bordering a window on the fuselage bottom. He made repairs and put out yesterday to fly in a rival course to Honolulu in quest of his unheard from competitors in the race.

All day long he and his navigator entertained an audience on both sides of the Pacific with their radiating fire radio messages telling of their position and activities in the plane.

'Bill' Erwin's Missing Rescue Plane Sends 'S. O. S.'--- Silence

San Francisco, Aug. 20 (A.P.)—An errand of mercy and rescue, apparently at a dramatic and sudden end, vast reaches of the Pacific were being combed today for Captain William P. Erwin and Captain A. H. Eichwaldt, pilot and aviator, respectively, of the rescue plane Dallas Spirit.

The plucky pair started from Oakland yesterday to wing their way over unused lanes of the water between here and Hawaii in an effort to "spot" the missing Dole flight planes—Golden Eagle and Miss Doran, or their five occupants.

Whether fate intervened or their radio equipment went out of order is not known. But at 9:02 o'clock last night, the following message flashed into the office here of the Associated Press: "S. O. S. tail spin." Then silence.

As swiftly as the lightning cleaves the sky, came the cry for help from Erwin and Eichwaldt. Lulled into security by the pleasant greetings received over many hours the A. P. operator, suddenly electrified into action, began writing furiously. Here is what poured into his ears.

"West into tail spin—came out O. K. But sure scared. Sure was a close call. Bill (Erwin) thought it was all off, but we came out of it—the lights on the instrument board went out and it was so dark that Bill couldn't see the x x x S. O. S. x x x Tail spin." He heard no more

It was a stunning climax to a noble undertaking. The A. P. operator gasped, handed his copy to an editor and turned back to his instruments. Feverishly he twirled the dials of the radio, listened for some further sign from the ether. There was no response.

The little monoplane, equipped with a sending set, had been in constant communication with the Associated Press offices here and through the afternoon and well into the night, the operator had copied messages from the fliers, as they

Clues to Lost Planes Chased in Vain Over Waters of the Pacific

Honolulu, Aug. 20 (A. P.).—Mercantile ships and naval seaplanes today had searched nearly all Hawaiian waters without finding the slightest trace of the Miss Doran and the Golden Eagle, Dole race entrants, three days overdue in Honolulu and without doubt wrecked or helpless.

Submarines have investigated the windward side of all the island except Kauai, while seaplanes have rounded Cahua and most of Maui and Molokai. Submarines also searched the waters between the islands of Mau, Hawaii and Kahoolawe.

Meanwhile, other naval vessels are searching from San Francisco and the destroyers Sunnadin and Pelican are covering fixed courses at sea north of Maui. The Sunnadin and Pelican have been out since Wednesday night, the day following the departure of the two missing planes from Oakland.

The Associated Press representative aboard the Sunnadin reported high seas off Mukapuu Point, Island of Oahu, at midnight of Wednesday which caused naval authorities to express doubt as to the ability of any airplane to survive on the surface of the water in such weather.

At 9 o'clock Thursday night the Sunnadin reported having sighted a flare in the north. Both the Sunnadin and the Pelican investigated, but found nothing.

The rumor crop Friday was much smaller than on Thursday, principally because of the reaction locally against publication in the Honolulu Advertiser of the erroneous report that the Miss Doran, piloted by John A. Pedlar and navigated by Lieutenant Vilas R. Knope, with Miss Mildred Doran of Flint, Mich., as passenger, had been found and these aboard rescued.

Residents of all the islands, however, continued to watch the seas carefully, and some reports were received of "mysterious" floating objects. The credulity of the people has been strained, however, and they are seemingly unwilling to guess at anything being an airplane unless it is quite well proved not to be anything else.

Rewards for the recovery of the lost fliers now total $40,000, half from James Doe, sponsor of the Oakland-Honolulu race flight; $10,000 from William K. Mailoska of Flint, Mich., sponsor of the Miss Doran, and $10,000 from the San Francisco Examiner, whose plane, the Golden Eagle, is one of the missing.

This successful fliers in the Dole contest were entertained last night by the Engineers Association before whom Art Gobel, pilot of the Woolaroc, winner of the flight, declared flights from San Francisco to Hawaii can be made with perfect safety provided proper preparations are made. Those present at the meeting stood for a half minute in silent prayer for the safety of the occupants of the Miss Doran and the Golden Eagle.

Martin Jensen, pilot of the second place plane, Aloha, expressed the opinion that Pedlar, in the Miss Doran, probably came to the sea between 600 and 800 miles from San Francisco, basing his belief on his remembrance of the trouble with the mechanical trouble with the ninth cylinder of his motor, which never had functioned properly. Jensen said Pedlar and the others could float their lifeboats safely for ten days.

Reported Finding of Girl's Body on Raft Discounted

Los Angeles, Aug. 20 (A.P.)—Radio experts today were inclined to discount a message made by E. W. Leroy, Alhambra, Cal., radio operator, that he had picked up a message from an unnamed passenger ship in mid-ocean saying that a girl, presumably Miss Mildred Doran, had been found dead on a raft with a live companion.

Leroy, however, said he was certain that the message was not a hoax. The message read:

"Passenger ship reports girl found dead, man alive on life raft 512 m. Picked up raft, sank plane at sight."

In his opinion, Leroy said, the message came from within 1,000 miles of the Pacific Coast, and if authentic, it was being relayed from one ship to another at sea.

Both the Federal Telegraph Company and the Radio Corporation of America discounted the report and the Federal Company pointed out that Leroy received the message on a 40 to 42-meter wavelength, whereas all passenger ships carrying radio have 600 to 700-meter wavelengths.

Consequently, the experts maintained, it would have been impossible for Leroy to have picked up a message from a ship 1,600 miles or more at sea. No passenger ships the experts commented, are known to be in the vicinity in which Leroy's message would place them.

Leroy declared that he regularly picked up stations as far distant as Australia, and his acquaintances declared he had a good reputation for radio ability and reliability.

Capt. Erwin, Lost Flier, Won D. S. C. In World War

Dallas, Tex., Aug. 20 (A.P.).—Ranking as one of America's foremost aviators in the World War, Captain P. Erwin, pilot of the Dallas Spirit, undertook a round-the-world flight from Dallas, August 10, to round out a decade of flying.

He wore the Distinguished Service cross, won in the war. Eight enemy planes were brought down by the young officer—he is now thirty-one—and he was shot down in his flying machine several times. Born at Ryan, Okla., Erwin was educated to be a musician. He became a pilot in September, 1917.

Wife of 'Old Glory's' Backer Drives Big Plane 2,000 Feet Up

STEPS ABOARD FOR JAUNT IN CLOUDS

Photo shows Pilot Lloyd Bertaud and an assistant helping Mrs. William Randolph Hearst into "Old Glory" for a flight on the eve of the big Fokker's hop for Rome.

SKIMMING HIGH OVER THE FIELDS OF LONG ISLAND

When the plane reached a height of 2,000 feet and was running smoothly, Bertaud turned the controls over to Mrs. Hearst, and she drove the beauty of the air which her husband is backing in its flight over the seas and half of Europe in the first non-stop and return ocean flight. The ship flew beautifully under her guidance, although it was Mrs. Hearst's first flight.

WALKER WEEPS AS ERIN GIVES WELCOME

Dublin, Aug. 20 (I.N.S.).—Mayor James J. Walker of New York city came back to Erin—the home of his fathers—to receive such a spontaneous demonstration that he had hardly recovered today from the emotions that overcame him.

"There were tears in my eyes—tears of sadness and tears of joy," said Walker when he spoke today of the welcome he received, first in Kingstown and later in Dublin. "It was too overwhelming to be described. I am deeply and sincerely grateful."

Not only the piers and the streets but even the hills back of Kingstown, were crowded with people who shouted and cheered themselves hoarse. Irish and American flags were everywhere. The Free State Military Band played incessantly, mingling "The Star Spangled Banner" with "The Soldiers' Song," the new anthem of the new Irish State.

"Will You Love Me As You Did in May?" a song written by Mayor Walker before he entered politics, is proving a popular air with the bands that greet him. So is "The Sidewalks of New York."

HUB LAWYER CALLED TO SYRACUSE UNIVERSITY

Attorney Victor Levina of Boston, special assistant to U. S. Attorney General John G. Sargent, has accepted a call to the professorship of law at Syracuse University and will resign as soon as pending litigation can be disposed of.

Mr. Levine is 34 years old and was born in the North End. He graduated from English High School in 1910, Harvard in 1915 and Harvard Law School in 1919. At Harvard Law School he was editor of the Harvard Law Review.

Mr. Levine practiced law in Boston two years and in 1922 became a member of the New York law firm of Ivins, Wolff & Hoguet. Attorney Levine is a brother of Henry Levine, a well-known Boston musician.

JAMES OLIVER CURWOOD LEFT $400,000 ESTATE

Owosso, Mich., Aug. 20 (A.P.).—The will of James Oliver Curwood, author, filed in Probate Court this morning, makes bequests totalling more than $400,000.

The widow and three children, James Oliver Curwood, Jr., of Owosso, Mrs. Charlotta Curwood Jirus, of Detroit, and Miss Viola Curwood of New York, divide $300,000 almost equally, and numerous bequests of from $750 to $10,000 each to other relatives, to churches and civic institutions here, are provided.

'DANCING BARBER' TO GO ON TRIAL SEPT. 19

Lawrence, Aug. 20 (A.P.).—George E. Taylor, itinerant barber accused of the murder of Stella Pomikala, the Lawrence girl whose body was found at Salisbury Beach on June 6, will stand trial during the session of Superior Criminal court which opens in this city on Sept. 19, Dist. Atty. William G. Clark, announced today.

FRIEND OF LINDY IS KILLED IN AIR CRASH

St. Louis, Aug. 20 (A.P.).—Lieutenant George Stumpf, Thirty-fifth Division Air Corps, friend of Colonel Lindbergh, was killed, and Lieutenant C. C. Hutchinson, pilot, was seriously injured when their airplane crashed 20 miles south of here today.

Ford Sterling to Get Role in Blonde's Film

By LOUELLA O. PARSONS.

Los Angeles, Aug. 20.—The most important male character in "Gentlemen Prefer Blondes" is, by popular vote, Gus Eisman, button manufacturer and Lorelei's boy friend. Almost as much interest has centred around finding the right actor to create Eisman on the screen as in the choice of the blonde gold-digger herself.

Anita Loos, after looking over the prospects, has decided upon Ford Sterling to portray the Chicago button manufacturer.

Anita, who has been here with her husband, John Emerson, for the last few weeks, has been looking at an average of ten prospective Lorelei's a day. She says she is suffering from blonde blindness.

Ford Sterling is an excellent choice for Mr. Eisman, if he doesn't try to overplay the gentleman from Chicago. Sometimes Mr. Sterling gets completely carried away by a characterization, with unfortunate results.

The rumor that Ramon Navarro will enter a monastery is rather disconcerting to Irving Thalberg and those in charge at Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer. With two years' contract with Mr. Navarro and a full schedule of pictures ahead, Mr. Thalberg is wondering how young Navarro would live in a monastery and still be making pictures.

However, Ramon assures M-G-M that like many good stories this one may be classed with Mark Twain's death. He begins work almost immediately on "The Sea King," a costume play on the type of "Scaramouche."

"The Sea King," to be directed by Robert Leonard, will be followed by "The Prince of Graustark" and then, if Ramon is a good, little boy, he is promised a vacation.

Farina is back at work. After a month spent eating watermelons he has started work on an Our Gang comedy with Bob McGowan directing. Stan Laurel and Jim Finlayson have also returned. In fact, the Roach Studios have come to life again.

Marie Dressler is the type who never does anything by halves. She puts her whole soul into her art. While playing a scene in "Bringing Up Father," in which she does an effective Mrs. Pinty Moore, and Polly Moran does justice to the Fitzy Maggie, she nearly caused a panic. In one scene she was supposed to kick Maggie through the door. She kicked her so hard that Miss Mora's lace dress was torn.

LOYALTY FIRST ATTRIBUTE OF 100 PCT. AMERICAN

New York, Aug. 20 (A.P.)—William C. Durant, automobile magnate and spectacular Wall Street operator, believes a 100 per cent American is one who is 100 per cent loyal to this country and who will help make it "an unconfortable abiding place" for those of lesser loyalty.

"My definition of a 100 per cent American," he said in a statement today just prior to sailing for Europe on the Homeric, "is a man who believes in this country every minute of the day, every day of the month, every month of the year, week days, Sundays and holidays, first, last and all the time; a man who has confidence in our government and is willing to support it; a man who appreciates the wonderful opportunities afforded him under our form of government and is delighted that he is permitted to live here.

"He is a man who is willing to do his part to make America a liveable place for loyal Americans and an unconfortable abiding place for the other kind; a man who does not weaken every time he notices a sensational statement or a startling announcement in the newspapers, and who is not influenced by the idle gossip of maudlin, irresponsible people; a man who feels sure we can and will meet every important problem of the future exactly as we have in the past; a man of courage, a man of conviction, a man who does things."

a chicken coop. To the magistrate, Mateyoke admitted that he "had had a few drinks." There is a good deal of poison in a few modern drinks.

Lord Reading, recently viceroy of India, once a brilliant lawyer in the United States, has bought the London Chronicle for $14,000,000 and will enjoy dictating its policies.

Men as they grow old like to control a newspaper. Sometimes that isn't good for the newspaper's health, but it improves the health of the owner—keeps him thinking, excited, brain active, prolongs life.

The price paid for the Chronicle, one of the oldest newspapers in London, shows that a well-established newspaper property is the best possible investment.

At San Toy, mining town in Ohio, Ray Wiggins, annoyed, bit off the ear of his mother-in-law, Mrs. Amanda Taylor.

A mob around the courtroom wanted the man lashed, and the Mayor of San Toy told Wiggins he would quash the charge of "maiming and disfiguring" if he would take the lashing.

Wiggins said "yes." His back was stripped, he was lashed twenty-one times and everybody was happy, including the mother-in-law. What is the difference between a man that bites off his mother-in-law's ear and a mob that insists on a public lashing?

STEERING WHEEL KILLS CHARLESTOWN MAN

Attleboro, Aug. 20. (A. P.).—Everett T. Hayden, 29, of Charlestown, died today from injuries received when a telephone company truck ran into Turnpike Pond in Plainville, crushing him. A break in the steering wheel was blamed.

OLD GLORY ALL READY TO HOP TOMORROW

Curtiss Field, N. Y., Aug. 20 (A.P.)—Pilots J. D. Hill and Lloyd Bertaud will attempt to take off from Roosevelt Field on their non-stop flight to Rome in the Fokker monoplane, "Old Glory," tomorrow afternoon at 5 o'clock, Eastern standard time, weather conditions permitting, they announced today.

They were hopeful they would have a favorable west wind necessary for the take-off. The "Old Glory" is all set to go but for the final fueling for the 4,300-mile trip across the Atlantic.

The fliers inspected the runway at Roosevelt Field, which adjoins Curtiss Field. They said it was too soggy for a hop-off today, but expected the ground will be dried sufficiently tomorrow.

Mrs. Hearst Guides Old Glory in Flight

New York, Aug. 20.—The hands of Mrs. William Randolph Hearst drove the golden winged monoplane Old Glory, above Long Island and the border of the Atlantic Ocean on what will likely be the last trip of the great eagle before she leaves for Rome.

It was Mrs. Hearst's first trip into the air. After Lloyd Bertaud had flown the bolted bird to an altitude of 2,000 feet, Mrs. Hearst was given the controls. While the man-made eagle soared at 113 miles an hour, slipping through banks of clouds and catching the glint of the sun, Mrs. Hearst handled the controls which held the ship on its course.

SENDS RADIO.

After operating the control's for several minutes, the publisher's wife crept down the cat-walk from the cock-pit to the rear compartment and sent the following wireless-gram via the Old Glory radio to her husband in Los Angeles:

Mr. William Randolph Hearst,
Los Angeles Examiner,
Los Angeles, Cal.

On board Old Glory, flying over Long Island. I hope the boys will reach Rome in Old Glory. I think this is a most wonderful ship.
Milicent.

This was the second message which had been dispatched from Old Glory. The first message read:

Mr. William Randolph Hearst,
Los Angeles Examiner,
Los Angeles, Cal.

You have given us a marvelous ship. It will be up to us to reach Rome. You have done your part and we are happy.
Bertaud and Hill.

Arriving at Curtiss Field, accompanied by Mr. Payne and Jack Smith, Mrs. Hearst was greeted by Hill and Bertaud in front of Old Glory.

PRESENTS WREATH.

Mrs. Hearst gave the fliers the wreath of black magnolia leaves which will be dropped in the Atlantic by Bertaud and Hill after passing over Newfoundland in memory of Nungesser and Coli.

On the wreath in gold letters was this inscription:

TO NUNGESSER AND COLI:
YOU SHOWED THE WAY. WE FOLLOW.

The propeller of the single Jupiter motor was started. Mrs. Hearst was helped into the cock-pit of the ship. Bertaud gave the ship the gun, a mighty roar and Old Glory taxied across the windswept field and rose into the air.

After a 20-minute flight in the air, Old Glory zoomed down on the field to the accompaniment of the screeching of several hundred automobile horns.

"It is the most marvelous thrill in the world," Mrs. Hearst declared.

Legion Convention Sends U. S. Tourists Scurrying Home

Paris, Aug. 20 (A.P.).—Arrival of the American legionnaires for their convention here coincided with the beginning of the rush of American tourists for passage home.

The steamship offices are crowded with people, most of whom want to go back home in October, but who cannot find accommodations, most of the ships sailing at that time having been chartered by the legion.

Many are putting a hurried end to their European tours and taking earlier passage to avoid the rush.

NEARLY KILL FOUR WOMEN TRYING TO ROB GAS METER

Springfield, Aug. 20 (A.P.).—After nearly causing the asphyxiation of four elderly women by their efforts to rob a gas meter, Jeffery Bess and John Lambert, youths, were arrested today.

They admitted the police say, that they used an ax to break into a basement coin meter, severing a large pipe that freed the gas. The boys ran away and the women living the house were nearly overcome before discovering the cause.

SECOND SECTION

It's Still Mid-Summer in the Realm of Sport

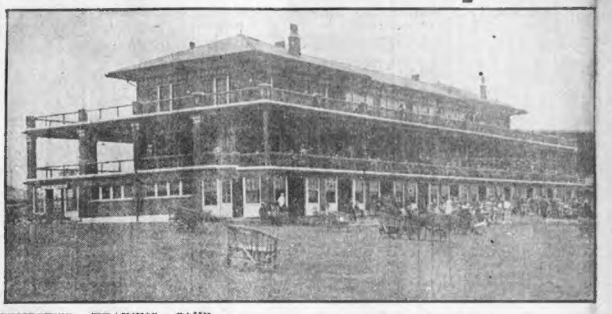
UPHELD AMERICA'S honor in Wightman Cup matches. Helen Wills, holding cup, and Mrs. George Wightman as the camera caught them after their doubles victory over Mrs. Godfree and Miss Harvey of England in the finals of the recent title tourney



DEMPSEY'S TRAINING CAMP. Lincoln Field race course, on the outskirts of Chicago, will be the scene of Jack Dempsey's preliminary work for his attempt to win back his heavyweight title from Gene Tunney at Soldiers Field, Chicago, Sept. 22.

BABE MEETS BABE. When the Yankees were sojourning in Washington recently, June Shirley, known as the Physical Culture Babe, visited the ball park and availed herself of the mighty bludgeon of Babe Ruth on which to practice her pet exercises. The Babe, that is the feminine one, is of Jacksonville, Fla.

PULCHRITUDE. Jimmy Sacco of East Boston doesn't boast much of that—whatever it is—but he sure can fight. He now ranks as one of the leading lightweights in the country as a result of his sensational victory over Sid Barbarian of Detroit.

GOODWIN SAYS HE PLANS NO RING WAR

Tom Goodwin, matchmaker for the Suffolk A. A., denies the knowledge of any "boxing war." With Goodwin, the promotion of boxing bouts is a business, and he stated to the press that he refuses to mix personal animosity with business. The statement was as follows:

"In deciding to stage popular-priced boxing shows on Monday nights at Fenway Park, the Suffolk A. A. chose the only night on which it has conducted boxing bouts in this city for the past 12 months. Because another club happened to hit upon Tuesday night seems to us no reason for not running shows on Monday night, especially since they have been running for three weeks and we have been running for 12 months.

"Boxing is a business. It is not war, and it has no connection with the war which was finished many years ago. The boxing public wants to see fights, and does not care who promotes them. In that connection, the Suffolk A. A. wishes to re-affirm a statement made a few days ago and scoffed at by some that the Suffolk A. A. will show the leading boxers in the country at popular prices. Its card for the night of August 29, will be announced Monday."

Hakes Wins Amateur Title

Chicago, Aug. 20. (A.P.)—A seventeen-year-old ornithologist with a knack of bagging birdies, today sported the Western Club amateur golf crown.

Playing a brilliant pitching and putting game, Albert Hakes, of Dunkirk, N. Y., captured the prized title, open only to amateurs between 15 and 19 years old, by downing Pat Finnis of Chicago after a hard-fought match which went to the 37th hole on the Indian Hill course yesterday.

His ability to bag birdies, which enabled him to come through a field of 256 contestants, brought the Dunkirk youth victory.

SMITH GAVE GREAT GOLF BATTLE

Runner-Up in Woodland Open Bowled Over Hard Opponents Until He Lost in Final

In spite of the fact that he was defeated in the finals of the championship flight at Woodland, the record set up by Myron Smith of that club during the past week is one of which he may well be proud.

His 8 and 7 defeat at the hands of Tommy Welch came upon the end of three days of what is probably the best golf Smith has yet shown. Teeing off for the qualifying round among the last starters, he came in after the first shadows of evening had fallen and the handicappers were well on their way in recording the cards of 140 players.

Smith not only qualified, but was well within the first division. But when the task of making the draw for match play was completed it did not appear as though he would figure prominently during the remainder of the week.

His first opponent was to be Bobby Cox of Tedesco, a player dangerous at both match and medal play and one who had shot a gross of 76 during the qualifying round. Smith, however, took the fast-stepping Cox over a rough 18-hole course, at the end of which the Tedesco man found himself one down.

J. W. Filson was next on the list. Filson, due to his overwhelming victory over C. L. K. Wright, 7 and 6, was given the edge over the Woodland player in spite of Smith's showing against Cox for the result was the same, and Smith advanced to the semi-finals, still running smoothly in high speed.

TOUGH OPPONENTS.

The draw continued against him, for he was now opposed to the former junior champion, Marshall Forcat of Vesper, whose name had been a by-word of the Woodland tourney. Forrest, with a splendid 74, had taken the first gross prize on Wednesday, and had not slackened his pace a bit.

Then, for the third consecutive round, Smith disposed of a man who was rated favorite over him. Forrest played his customary game, but Smith was just enough better to win.

The count was one up, after a closely contested match. In the meantime Tom Welch of Somerville, the well-known Woodland stallion-master and the man who was nominated to win the title before the beginning, had been hoeing a rough row in his match with Ed Schneider of Salem, the former Dartmouth star. The result was another 1 up decision, Smith and Welch became the finalists.

Inasmuch as Welch had started the favorite and had reached the finals, he was still given the edge for his last match, but there were many who had followed Smith during the three days of play who were inclined to count on him to come through. He had shot winning golf, flashing golf of the sort which comes through even after disastrous beginnings.

FALTERED AT END.

So when the Woodland man opened the fifth round with two very badly played holes, a dollar golf of the most extreme variety everyone figured he would soon settle down, and be himself when confident enough to chaff his opponent about his impending doom.

It developed, however, that he had shot his bolt, and although he did settle down and managed to outdrive Welch pretty consistently, his game lacked the fire of the previous rounds, and the dauntless player earned his 5 and 3 decision.

The defeat does not detract in the least from Smith's performance. Of all the players whom he might have met in match play, the draw could hardly have given him rougher opposition than Cox, Filson and Forcat, as preliminaries to the ultimate victor, Welch.

Over this array he rode roughshod, and although the handsome Woodland cup will not grace his mantel piece, he may find small consolation he can in the fact that his handicap is due for a substantial slicing in the near future.

Leo Flynn Denies He Misled Fight Experts

(This is the fourth of a series of articles in which Leo P. Flynn, the noted boxing man, tells how he brought back Jack Dempsey.)

By LEO P. FLYNN,
Manager of Jack Dempsey.

New York, Aug. 20.—Now we have arrived at that period in the trainnig of Jack Dempsey which I can best explain by answering some of the complaints made against me by the newspapermen. Some of them think I gave them a few bum steers at Saratoga.

They were the ones that fibbed not me. They made a number of assertions about Dempsey that asserted to our advantage, and I did not feel it was up to me to enlighten them. They had not bothered to ask for my side of their stories first, so I did not imagine they would be interested in what I had to say afterward

SOME of them said that Dempsey was all in. That was their opinion, and they were privileged to express it. Why should I take issue with them? Besides, I knew Sharkey would eat it up.

Others declared the workouts had proved Dempsey's speed was gone. They overlooked the fact that he was boxing on a four-inch felt pad, and none of them happened to notice that he was wearing unusually heavy shoes. I figured the transition to a fast ring and light shoes on the night of the fight would make Jack feel like a racehorse, and it did.

I knew Sharkey was gulping down every rap he read. Why should I have gone out of my way to expound my theories?

A few of the boys insisted we were holding a secret workouts, especially during the last few days. The only workouts we were holding helped to make Sharkey over-confident. He thought we were worried.

The night before the fight, one of the volunteer investigators discovered that Dempsey had injured his left arm. He didn't bother to question me, and I knew the story would please Sharkey. I let it go at that.

DEMPSEY was ready to fight ten days before the bout took place. I realized on the afternoon of July 13 that Jack was as strong and as fast as he ever would be. That complicated my job to beat the band.

I knew if I worked him every day, he would go stale. If I didn't work him enough, his stamina would suffer.

I cut the boxing in half. I worked him every two days instead of every day. I gave him light exercise and golf to keep his mind occupied on the off days.

There was a rap from every boxing expert in the land. First, they thought I was plain "daffy." Then they decided I was trying to trick them. I was never more on the up-and-up in my life. There were no bolshevik angles about those that took place in the little ring across from Tom Luther's hotel. I couldn't tell Dempsey got too hot, and I couldn't let him get too cold. My idea was to keep him ammering.

I firmly believe that Jim Jeffries would have made a much different showing against Jack Johnson had he used the system of training that I employed on Dempsey. As it was, Jeffries lost his fight in his training camp.

And Tex Rickard, who promoted the Jeffries-Johnson fight, agrees with me.

THE tragic death of Johnny Dempsey was a terrible blow. It took the heart out of Jack, and I know we were a pretty sick crew for several days. I don't mind saying now that I thought we were licked. Jack took it awful hard.

But Mrs. Dempsey saved the day. She took command of everything, and called Jack as often as three times a day during the period he was so blue. She made him feel there was someone sharing the burden, and that always helps.

IT was an anxious ten days for me, all the time between the day I realized that Jack was ready and the day we broke camp for New York. But my system worked beautifully, and I was a mighty confident man when we entered a compartment on a train bound for the big town.

But I reckoned without a handkerchief. It almost undid in an hour what I had worked a month to accomplish.

(In his next article Flynn will tell how a handkerchief almost forced him to postpone the fight.)

JOHNNY RISKO DUE HERE THIS AFTERNOON

The heavy rain of Thursday and Thursday night, also yesterday's cold drizzle, was taken as good signs by Eddie Mack of the Argonne A. A., as he opines that such are sure breeders of good weather for the big outdoor tourney of his club at the Braves Field next Tuesday night.

Johnny Risko of Cleveland, who is to meet Jack Delaney of New Bedford in the 10-round windup, will arrive here this afternoon. Tomorrow he will work out at Toland's gym in Friend street, also again on Monday.

In the other half of the windup another 10 rounder, Al Feldman of Roxbury and Cyclone Delisandro of Nashua are slated to do their prettiest.

The other classes will have their innings in the three fours and three sixes which will usher in the doings.

The second four will be contributed by Fred Mears of Fall River and Manuel Canto of the North End, they to be followed by Jack Sullivan of Seattle, Wash., now under the wing of Johnny Wilson, the former middleweight champion, and Johnny Cooney of the South End.

The office of the Argonne A. A. at 61 Court street will be open all day today, also all day Monday

CYCLING DERBY AT REVERE

The World's Cycling Derby, the most gruelling contest in cycling's calendar, will be staged tonight at the Revere cycle track.

Over the regulation European distance of 100 kilometers, or 62½ miles, the Derby develops into a contest of speed, skill and stamina, seven stars of the paced world will compete.

America's honors will be upheld by her three foremost pedal-pushers, Champion George Chapman, Frankie Krenzer and Charley Jaeger.

All eyes will be focussed on the reigning sensation of the paced game, Franco Georgetti.

Bobby Grassin, world's champion of 1925, will uphold the cycling honors of his beloved France.

Rene Boogman, the Holland rider, will carry a country's colors.

Charley Corkeyn will represent Belgium.

In addition to the amateur and pro handicap, a three-heat special sprint will bring together Willie Spencer and Freddie Spencer in three one mile heats.

In the pursuit race Carl Stockholm will oppose Jack Brooks.

Amateur Stars Enter Dilboy Show

Dilboy Post, V. F. W., of Somerville, have received entries from Hy Pimsard, West End; Frank Erso, Medford; Jimmy Levine, Worcester, and Johnnie Mack of Taunton, all ring-conferring for their opposite amateur boxing show, scheduled for next Thursday evening at Dilboy Field.

Harry Devine and Frank Erso will be remembered by the fans who attended the last Dilboy show as the pair who put up such a thrilling battle for top honors in their class.

Competition will be held in the following five classes: 118, 126 147, 160 pounds and heavyweights. A great many entries have already been received for all classes, including the best heavyweights in New England.

Entry blanks may be filed at Dilboy Post headquarters, K. of C. Building, Highland avenue, Somerville, where tickets may also be obtained.

How to Make Syrups for Fall Canning

By MARTHA LEE

"I HAVE gone up five pegs in [illegible] the handsome jars of [illegible] and jars that are fast accumulating in my pantry," writes a Jars [illegible]

"And I expect to can dozens of pears [illegible] Would you be a pal, and tell me how to make not-so-fair [illegible] and all the rest of the canning books that I can find are for earth [illegible] the end of [illegible] and I hate to experiment [illegible]

Do your number [illegible] answer letters and to [illegible] from efforts to relieve the lot of unmarried [illegible] and [illegible] serving and expert [illegible] housekeepers as I [illegible]

Syrup No. 1—[illegible] until [illegible] two quarts of water. Many canners make brine by adding a teaspoon of salt to each quart jar and pouring hot water from the kettle over [illegible]

[illegible] to pop a few wood [illegible] in the heater [illegible] jars if you have a hot air [illegible] It is easy to [illegible] and build up a fine winter supply of food.

If jars are to be handled it is a good plan to put a used rubber on the outside of each one, about midway up the jar. Then if they come in contact they are protected against breakage.

Never use canning compound or [illegible] They [illegible] preservatives as properly sterilized and sealed food will not spoil.

When supplies are bought for canning it is interesting to note the cost per jar of each variety and compare this for several successive years. It is amazing how low the average cost of some of the most delicious products will prove to be.

Baked beans pay Winter's debt for Summer. Bake twice as many as usual each week, from January to June, when [illegible] not [illegible] is a perfect, and can them during the hot months when no one wants [illegible] to bake beans.

Canning without sugar is not really economical. It is best to add a small amount of sugar at the time the canning is done as this assists in developing the flavor of the fruit. Adding sugar when the fruit is used involves extra labor and is much less satisfactory.

Make a Date Cake for Supper!

One of those spicy, melt-in-the-mouth confections that add so much to Sunday night suppers—or afternoon tea. A Date Cake—and here's the recipe. (Notice that it calls for Standard Sweetened Condensed Milk. That is to insure the more even texture, the more delicate crust and finer flavor that this form of milk gives to cakes and hot breads. Professional bakers here knows this secret for years!)

Date Cake

½ cup shortening
1½ cups brown sugar
2 eggs
3½ cups flour
5 teaspoons baking powder
2 teaspoon cinnamon
½ teaspoon nutmeg
1 teaspoon salt
½ cup Standard Sweetened Condensed Milk
½ cup water
1½ cupdatestemoned and chopped

Cream shortening and sugar thoroughly. Add well beaten eggs. To this mixture add gradually the dry ingredients, which have been sifted together, and the condensed milk and water. Add dates and nuts well. Bake in a greased tube or loaf pan in a moderate oven (350°F.) for fifty or sixty minutes.

Standard Sweetened Condensed Milk can put extra richness, flavor and economy into so much of your cooking! It is two ingredients in one—pure, fresh, full-cream country milk, smoothly blended with finest sugar. Super-rich, because, most of the water has been removed.

Get this fine milk from your grocer today. Keep it always on hand for cooking. For coffee, too! It creams-and-sugars your coffee to mellow golden perfection at only one-half the cost of separate cream and sugar! And there's never any waste—for Standard Sweetened Condensed Milk stays fresh for days after the can is opened—even without ice!

"You Said It, Marceline!"

-:- On Brides and Commonsense -:- By Marceline d'Alroy

Some brides think when their HUSBANDS fail to Come home to them right on the DOT
That they must be DEAD. This, of course,
Is FUNNY. But not to them.

BRIDES, as a rule, are invariably very SURE
Of themselves, and their POWER to PLEASE.
Yet many are AMUSING without knowing
It. They take EVERYTHING so SERIOUSLY.

BRIDES have no need of a sense of HUMOR.
For LOVE, in its first ecstasies, never
LAUGHS. It is only after PEOPLE have been MARRIED LONG that they see something
FUNNY in LOVE.

But when a WIFE realizes there are OTHER
Things than DEATH that will keep her HUSBAND
From her, she must have SENSE of some kind
And the COMMONER that sense is, the BETTER.

Worry and High Blood Pressure

By Chas. A. L. Reed, M. D.
Former President of the American Medical Association.

THERE is such a thing as high blood pressure, and high blood pressure is important, but there is a lot of bunk about it. It is a fashionable ailment. Sometimes it is even an obsession. Some people go about constantly speaking and thinking of their blood pressure and blame it for symptoms really due to other things. Many cultivate worry about their blood pressure. Worry actually has the effect of raising it, in that way forming a vicious circle. It is not a disease in itself, but a symptom of some underlying disorder, which may be serious, but which is not necessarily so.

Those who come of a family with high blood pressure need not be over-anxious, and if they will have themselves overhauled by their family doctor once or twice a year they will insure themselves against chronic disease. There is nothing so good as moderation in all things. The hard-working and hard-living man of affairs must relax the strain of his life. He should learn to play, to take real holidays and frequent days or week-ends off, to follow a hobby and to avoid over-eating, especially of meat. It is a good if not a popular rule to stop eating before the appetite is completely satisfied. Regular exercise within one's powers is to be encouraged.

It is a mistake to get scared and cut down the diet too severely.

A sample of the bunk peddled out as high pressure victims is the advice that it is better to avoid clear soups, meat extracts, sweetbreads and strong tea or coffee and not to eat too much starch or sugar. This means practically nothing left to eat. Vegetables and fresh fruit generally are good, but sometimes they don't agree. The suggestion that table salt raises the pressure is doubtful.

On the whole, the thing to aim at is a simple diet sufficiently varied, satisfying, but not excessive. There is no evidence that alcohol directly raises the blood pressure but since it has a generally depressing and degenerative influence on tissues it should only be used in strict moderation.

Tobacco causes an immediate though transient rise in blood pressure, followed by a fall to normal or below, and is usually regarded as undesirable. The blood pressure of regular healthy smokers tends however, to be low, and as tobacco smoking has a strong soothing effect the man with high blood pressure need not deprive himself of it unless it causes ill effects such as pain in the heart or irregularity of pulse.

Where's Emily?

by CAROLYN WELLS
Author of "The MYSTERY GIRL"

Story of a Girl Who Did Just What She Chose and Then Took Flight

Emily Duane is about to marry Rodney Sayre, conservative, and scion of an old New England family. Emily, parentless, is extremely wealthy, charming, high-spirited and impulsive. Hindu mysticism is her fad. She wills a large sum to Swami Lal Singh, her teacher.

Two days before the wedding Emily decides to have a rehearsal of the ceremony. Burton Lamb, best-man-to-be; Betty Bailey and Nell Harding, bridesmaids; Polly Pennington, matron of honor, and her husband, Jim; Pete Gibby, Betty Bailey's beau; Emily, Rodney and Emily's Aunt Judy are talking things over, and among the subjects is Emily's bequest. The will she announces is cancelled when she becomes Rodney's wife. The Swami overhears and is incensed.

Emily then gets a message that Mrs. Kitty Laurence, a dear friend, has become a mother, and she drops everything to go to the hospital. It develops that Polly Pennington has left with Emily. Jim Pennington waits for his wife, but gets nervous after a while and phones the hospital.

Neither Emily nor Polly has been there——

CHAPTER XII.

"I THINK," he began, and the Chief sat back in silence. It was quite plain to be seen that he was quite content to leave the inquiries to another.

"I think," Lawlor said, "that we want to begin at the beginning. Who was the last one to see Miss Duane as she left the house?"

"I don't know about seeing her," said Sayre, slowly, "but I dare say I was the last one to speak to her. She had been telephoning the hospital, and she ran in here to me to say she was going over to the hospital to see a new baby there. She told me not to tell anybody, as she would be back in ten minutes. So I obeyed her, and just waited for her return."

"Did any one else here see Miss Duane go?" asked Lawlor, but they all looked blankly at one another.

"Yes," the butler, new hand, said flatly, suddenly. "He saw her go out the back door."

"Call him in," said the detective, shortly, and Prall was summoned.

"Yes, sir," he informed, "I saw Miss Emily go out the back door—"

"The kitchen door?" he was asked.

"No, sir; it's a door that opens into a back hall, an entry."

"I see. Go on."

"That's all, sir. I just chanced to see Miss Emily run out that door, like she was in a hurry."

"Didn't you think it strange she should use that door?"

"Well, no, sir, I didn't think anything about it. I was busy with my work, and too, Miss Emily she's always doing things other people don't do. I've seen her go out of a window when there was a door open and handy."

Lawlor looked at the others for confirmation of this, and Jim Pennington said, "That's right. Miss Duane was, well, whimsical, and often did unexpected things. It was nothing remarkable for her to go out the back door, if she wished to escape observation."

"I see. And which way did she go, Prall?"

"I don't know, sir. I didn't look after her at all. I just saw her go out."

"Have on a hat and coat?"

"Neither, sir, just a fur skin round her neck. I noticed that without exactly thinking about it, but I can see her in my mind."

"Yes, a mental picture, a photographic recollection. Think well, now, Prall. Did she seem perturbed? Bothered? Anxious? Worried?"

"Not a bit of it, sir. She was gay as a lark, humming a little tune, like she often does. When she's happy."

"Then, so far as I can see, that's all we can learn at first hand of her procedure. Now, Mr. Pennington, what of your wife? When did you see her last?"

After a Quarrel

It's Easier to Remember Than to Forget

Drawn by DOROTHY FLACK

"AND blessings on the falling out
That all the more endears,
When we fall out with those we love
And kiss again with tears."
—Tennyson.

Love's quarrels—those poignant, tragic things that Dan Cupid insists on engineering occasionally, especially when he sees everything running so easily and smoothly. And what terrible things they usually are! Bitter reproaches, exaggerated accusations, stubborn silences, then—the parting! Both determined that they won't give in, that they'll never speak again, that they'll never, never forgive nor forget!

But oh, how hard that is! So much easier said than done, for each finds remembrances of dear moments, of sweet silences, of tender caresses, and the old French proverb comes stealing along and they find that "Who loves well is now to forget" was never truer than it is at that time.

"We Went Away From Here Together," Jim Said

"We went away from here, together," Jim said; "we said good-by to Mrs. Kent and to Miss Duane and we spoke to a few others as we left the room. Then we walked along together, toward home, and my wife said she wished I'd stop over to the store and get her some cigarettes. She said she'd manage along until I brought up with her again."

"And did you?"

"No. I was delayed a few moments getting the cigarettes and when I again reached the point where I had left her, I didn't see her. But I thought nothing of that and went on toward home, hurrying a little then. I might overtake her. But I didn't see her at all, so I concluded she had reached the house before me. I went in the house and to my surprise she wasn't there at all. I called Rosa, the maid, and she said Mrs. Pennington had not come in.

"Even then, I didn't think much about it, assuming that some one she knew had come along, and she had gone off on some trivial errand. I even thought that perhaps Emily Duane had run after her for some purpose, I didn't know then anything about the hospital baby or that Emily had gone over there. So, I just waited around a while. I called up this house and one or two others where my wife might have gone, but I could get no word of her, so I just waited. I worried a little but not much, for with the wedding preparations going on, all the girls have been on the jump, and you never know where they'll be next."

"The maid could tell you nothing."

"Nothing at all. How could she? Mrs. Pennington went out with me when we came over here in the afternoon, and when I reached home, she hadn't appeared at all."

"But, I mean, the maid said nothing about Mrs. Pennington having some other engagement or—"

"No."

"Then as far as I can see," the detective seemed to come out of a brown study, "these two women disappeared within a few moments of one another. It isn't logical to suppose their absence are entirely disconnected."

"And yet," the chief interposed, "if they had been together when it happened, I mean whatever did happen, accident or anything—one of them could have brought back the news."

"You're predicting something along the lines of a sprained ankle or broken leg," Pete Gibby, declared. "Now, that isn't a probable explanation at all."

"Indeed," said Lawlor, lofty. "Just what is your notion of a probable explanation?"

"That the two of them were abducted or kidnaped by men of evil intent."

"Go On," Urged Pennington, "What Do You Mean?"

"Abductions of grown people are not often heard of," Lawlor began.

"Disappearances of well to do young women are not, either," Pete told him. "But there is a system of abductions—"

"Oh, Pete, shut up!" Rodney cried out, as one in agony. "Do shut up, I can't stand everything!"

"Go on," urged Pennington. "What do you mean? If there's any theory, however awful, let us have it."

"Were those ladies wearing conspicuous jewelry?" Lawlor asked suddenly. "No," Pennington began; but Gibby interrupted:

"Yes, Miss Duane was. She had on a diamond necklace that Mr. Sayre gave her for a wedding present."

"Aha," and Lawlor looked like a man who has discovered all. "That's it, then."

"What's it?" demanded Sayre. "Suppose robbers did take that necklace, where are the two girls? You can't assume that they killed them and disposed of their bodies in this short time."

"Why not?" said Lawlor, calmly. "You have hunted and searched for two live women, but no search has been made for dead ones."

"Look here, Mr. Lawlor, said Burton Lamb, "I understand your interest and your desire for action, but need you be quite so bluntly definite? Have you no consideration for the feelings of those near and dear to the missing ladies? Have you not even the common decency to speak a little less crudely?"

"I thought you wanted police work done. Lawlor said, sulkily, "I'm not in the habit of mincing words."

"Let him alone, Burt," Sayre said. "Neither Pennington nor myself care how he expresses his fears. We're all apprehensive that a second accident or sudden death has brought this tragedy, and the sooner we begin real investigation the better. I propose that searching parties be organized at once, police, neighbors, volunteers, anybody who care look for the girls, dead or alive. We dare not wait till morning. It's all very well to say that if one had been hurt or maimed the other could come to tell us. They may both be hurt, dying, even, and here we sit, palavering over the matter!"

"But what can we do in the dark, Mr. Sayre?" asked Lawlor, a little petulantly. "I think we must wait for daylight."

"You may, but I shan't," said Rodney, with determination. "Do you suppose I could go to bed? Or Mr. Pennington, either? No. We will go on another search. Anything is better than inaction" If you as officials want to organize and conduct a hunt, all right. If not, it must be amateur."

The policemen went away, promising to conduct the search with despatch.

"That's all right," Pennington said, after they had left, "but all the same you've got me stirred up with your awful suggestions, and I've got to go out and hunt, myself. You see, the idea of Emily's necklace puts a new face on it all. It was dear you know, and if those two girls did start over toward the hospital, which is the only thing I can picture them doing, why a passing motor might have been full of bandits, who—

"Needn't have so many," said Gibby, "One bandit, in a car would have been enough to overpower Emily, grab the diamond chain—"

"Then Polly won't have given the alarm," said Pennington. "Grant two bandits, Gibby."

"All right, two bandits, then. But some such thing happened.

"Go on," said Rodney, wearily. "What did the bandits do next?"

"Beat the girls up or left them unconscious, and made off with the loot."

"Oh, Pete, you're worse than the policeman!" cried Betty.

"Forgive me, I didn't mean to be. But that's how I see it."

Just then Prall came in and whispered to Rodney, who rose and left the room with the butler.

"The chief wants to see you, sir," Prall said, still softly.

Sayre followed the butler to the dining room.

"I thought I'd better tell you first," said the chief. "We were going back to the station to get the search party into shape, when, as we crossed the bridge over the ravine, Sergeant Murdock noticed the rail was broken away—

"Which ravine?

"The little one. And he had a powerful flashlight and he turned it down over the rail, and far below, we could see what looked like a huddled up body. Murdock climbed down and found it was Mrs. Pennington—dead.

'The Catspaw'; Sylvia and Vance Attend the Theatre

By ROBERT TERRY SHANNON.

CHAPTER 24

SYLVIA felt herself grow warm all over with desperate, deliberate guilt. The role of a siren—quick action had been necessary—was the inspiration of a critical moment. Then as she realized that Vance Ackerman's philandering had brought a death threat from J. A. Liggett, Sylvia thrilled at the consciousness of her own power. Vance Ackerman was subtly infatuated with Margot Liggett; yet, by the summoning to the surface of some mysterious feminine lure, she had, almost instantly, captured him. The sensation stimulated her like heady wine.

Immediately, however, she put such vanity out of her mind. Overshadowing all else was the imminent tragedy, the stunning menace that had generated her swift strategy. The cracked voice of Jack Liggett, deadly with intensity of purpose, still rang in her ears as it threatened Vance Ackerman with murder if he persisted in his pursuit of Liggett's ex-wife.

"I want you to call up Mrs. Liggett right away and break your engagement for tonight," Sylvia urged him, forcing into her voice a petulance slightly tinged with affection.

Vance Ackerman's eyes were beginning to gleam with interest. "Don't tell me your jealous!" he said, as though he could scarcely credit his senses.

Once more she was swept with an aching pity for this man who was, somehow, not his own master. Yet in the social and business world, he was, to all outward appearances, still a dominating figure. Only the little group close around him knew its inner crumbling. [illegible] so easy to flatter him, his reaction had been that of a pleased child. No wonder Margot Liggett was having such an easy time with him! For his wife, Joyce, the whole situation must have represented constant torture.

Ackerman, robust and slightly florid, smiled at Sylvia with satisfaction. Apparently he saw nothing unusual in her strange request.

"Phone her now!" Sylvia insisted.

Reluctantly, he picked up the telephone. The task was made easier for him by the fact that Mrs. Liggett happened not to be at home. He was able to leave word with a servant that it would be impossible for him to keep his engagement with her.

"That's fine," Sylvia told him. "Now I'll go and start getting ready for dinner. Shall we go out directly after?"

"Anything you say," Ackerman declared. "What shall it be; theatre and dancing later on?"

That she told him, would be delightful.

In her own room, Sylvia faced the concentrated effort of deciding whether or not to confide fully in Mrs. Ackerman. The whole thing was shattering to logical thought, and she yearned desperately to help. It came to her that Alexander Ladd first of all, was the person to tell but upon telephoning his apartment she found that he was not in. His aid—his advice—would have steadied her immensely.

The effect of the revelation upon Mrs. Ackerman was unpredictable. Nevertheless, Sylvia decided to tell her everything.

It was—yet it was dinner. Joyce Ackerman, in her boudoir listened to Sylvia's story—horrified almost in childish long suffering. Last brought a halted, desperate look to her rather beautiful eyes. Her interesting face was wan and pale.

"I knew it! I felt all along that something terrible would happen," she said in a muffled voice. "But you did right—you did the one best thing possible. But tonight is only one night. There will be night after night to fear in the future. The terrible thing is that we are all so helpless. Whatever we do, sooner or later, it seems certain to end in tragedy. We must reach Alexander Ladd and get him here at all costs."

They phoned Ladd again, but without success. Stark hopelessness was in Joyce's eyes.

"No good turning to Stuart," she said, despondently. "He can't solve anything. We won't tell him a word. You—I don't know what to say to you. I thought I could do this on a gamble, that we might be able to help—and we are helpless—better than anyone else in the world. You're not frightened?"

The truth was that Sylvia was oddly thrilled. True, her sympathies were involved, but there was also an element of adventure and excitement. She was not quite able to [illegible] The intrigue—the interest—even her with a nervous buoyancy.

"I'm sure there is no danger—for tonight at least," she told Joyce Ackerman. "Meanwhile, we can get in touch with Mr. Ladd. Perhaps he can somehow put pressure on Mrs. Liggett and get her to be reasonable. Burt Sayre said, "Well see what Alexander thinks." Joyce broke in. "But I'm afraid even he won't be able to do much. The thing to do immediately is to get you properly dressed."

To the credit of Joyce Ackerman, be it said that she undertook the arduous task of outfitting another woman to delight her own husband's eye, she kept the tears back from her eyes with a bravery that only a wife could understand.

When Sylvia had been cut before with Vance Ackerman, she had worn an orchid gown. This time one of frazile blue was selected. Again the snowy ermine wrap was lifted from its protecting bag. True, even more than Vance Ackerman's luxurious foreign automobile, symbolized to Sylvia the glamour of wealth. Feminel The very word fascinated her. Only people of wealth possessed ermine. Margot Liggett, pampered and fadled, wore its immaculate purity over her rounded, wicked shoulders. Indeed, Margot's wrap was almost indistinguishable from Joyce's. Perhaps they had both come from the same exclusive fur-

Sleek and resplendent, Sylvia joy-hungry hearts! The glamour dined at the Ackerman home. Ackerman, faultless in his evening clothes, seemed more than ever his old self. Stuart Gifford was notably morose; Joyce, aloof and mysterious.

Then later. Lights and music! The song and dance of the revue! Comedians, grotesques of face and [illegible] fawns. Frolic! Laughter! Happiness! The glitter of the Boston [illegible]

The curtain slid down while the theatre was still filled with the tuneful finale from the stage.

"Great show!" Ackerman said, clapping his hands. "Now I'm going to show you something, little girl, that will give you even more of a kick, I think. Ever hear of Colonel [illegible]

THIS IS GOING A LITTLE TOO FAR, MISS TREVEOR

Haven't You Made Sweet Maudine Suffer Enough?—Another Annoying Chapter From Ella Wheeler Wilcox' Classic.

Well, the "white-winged birdling of a letter," as the author calls it, was a note from Miss Trever to Trevori, in which she begged in this fashion—

"But three weeks more of girlhood are left to me
And then the Springtime! So you'll come and be
My bridesmaid, darling! Do not say me nay.
Come, if you can, just two weeks from today,
My sweet,
Without your presence
My wedding would be incomplete.
I will meet you, dearie, at the train.
Your happy, loving Helen." Then the pain—
Oh, Helen Trever (or Trevor) have you no eyes . . . can't you see how "steeped is Maurine's heart in anguish and despair"? You have taken Vivian Dangerfield from her and now you . . .

Let us, chokingly, put the book aside until Monday.

MEN WHO MAKE AMERICA WHAT IT IS TODAY

This is Monitor Hacksaw, who has leased all the rock crushers in America to help meet the demand for cracked ice in Chicago during September. The big fight and the possibility of the Cubs getting in on the World Series, says Hacksaw, call for emergency measures.

"I would hate to be on the pass gate at the Chicago fight," coughs Hap O'Connor, "with them machine guns playing a rat-tat-tat."

A WIFE'S MEDITATIONS

By HELEN ROWLAND

ONE of the things that no man will ever understand "this side of Paradise" is the way in which a woman's minds works.

* * *

To him, its workings are as unfathomable as the channels of the Atlantic Ocean and as devious as the course of a mountain stream. Her thoughts do not flow according to any mariner's chart but dart, tsar, double and interlace in a fascinating fashion that keeps him in a perpetual fog of bewilderment.

No man can understand, for instance, why the sight of an innocent squirrel running up a tree in mid-August should remind a woman that he promised her a new fur coat for Christmas!

* * *

Or why the fragrance of fresh-cut lilacs should make her lean sentimentally on his arm and ake him it he still loves her as much as he did in their courting days.

Or why a field of golden rod should remind her that she must get at the fall cleaning and decide on the new breakfast room curtains.

Or why the toot of a distant tugboat whistle should remind her that her imported perfume is all gone or that she needs a new Paris hat or that the Oriental rugs should go to the cleaners.

It is a deep, dark mystery to any man, why the sight of a lame beggar limping past should prompt his wife to ask him if he got his feet wet yesterday and when he is going to put on his woolens. Or why the faint sound of an asthmatic old gentleman coughing, next door, should inspire her to pull the covers up over her husband's shoulders, put her arm around his neck and wonder what on earth she'll DO if he should DIE!

* * *

Or why the shriek of a passing fire-engine should remind her that she forgot to put her best silver tray in the safety-vault or that it is almost time to renew the insurance on the furniture.

No man can understand why the fleeting glimpse of a tooth-powder poster depicting a fascinating blonde smiling up at an adoring young man should start his wife probing him about the new stenographer in his office and make her look distrait and thoughtful for the rest of the evening.

* * *

Or why the sight of a silk hat should remind her that he promised to get seats for the opera, this season. Or why the pie-throwing quarrel scene between husband and wife in a movie comedy should make her clutch his arm and kiss him on the chin under cover of the darkness.

* * *

The only sights, sounds and smells that stir a MAN'S imagination are those connected with the dinner-bell!

* * *

And naturally, he can never, never understand that a woman's imagination works on a hair-trigger and responds to the touch like a polo pony!

* * *

But that's the way women ARE!

Advice to the Lovelorn

DEAR MISS FAIRFAX:

I was keeping company with a certain young lady for seven months. I invited her out on an average of once every two weeks, because my folks do not allow me out more often. She has not as yet refused any of my invitations.

When I go out with her I have to do all the talking. Occasionally she puts in a few words. I have never been invited directly to her home. She doesn't go out with any other man, nor do I go with any other girl. I have decided to love her a great deal.

Recently I attempted to kiss her good night. She refused. She now refuses to have anything to do with me.

I love this girl a lot and hate to lose her. How do you advise me to go about getting out of my predicament? She is eighteen. I am nineteen. DAVID.

IT was rude of you to try to kiss her, David. No wonder she is offended.

You owe her an apology. The next time you see her, why not tell her frankly that you are sorry you tried to force her to kiss you. Ask her to give you another chance. If she cares for you, she will, I am sure, be glad to start the friendship over again.

Be careful not to forget yourself a second time. If she refuses to accept your apology, you will have to drop the matter. Neither friendship nor love can be forced.

If you and she decide to be friends again, and I sincerely hope you will, ask her whether you may come to see her, either some evening or on a Sunday afternoon. It is your privilege to ask permission to call on a girl you know and like.

You will not be able to think seriously of marriage, I imagine, for several years. So do not permit yourself to be sentimental about this friendship. Content yourself with being just a fine friend and pal for a while longer.

DEAR MISS FAIRFAX:

I am seventeen years of age and am considered very good looking. I have been invited to an affair with a young man about twenty-one.

Although I have consented to go, I am in doubt as to whether I wish to do so, for this man is a little stout and I fear I may be laughed at by my girl friends.

I do like him as a friend and would like your suggestion in the matter. Please let me know what you think best. Should I go with him?

I would like to go very much, because if I do not accept, I will go without him and that would certainly hurt his feelings.

MEDBURY SAYS---

By JOHN F. MEDBURY

THERE are so many automatic musical instruments on the market nowadays that compositions of the old masters no longer have to be murdered by hand.

THE modern method is to electrocute them.

PEOPLE still play to kill time, but they use up-to-date weapons.

IT used to take fifteen minutes to render the Blue Danube Waltz, and now electricity can do it in half the time.

IT won't be long until farmers will be able to run their planes by gas.

AND then the works of Chopin and Wagner can be asphyxiated.

CHILDREN don't have to take music lessons any more. The electric light and power company does their playing for them.

THE only thing they have to know is where to find the switch.

PRACTICE doesn't interfere with their fun. They just push the button and go on with their games.

ONE woman wanted her son to keep up with his music, so she made him wind the phonograph twice a day.

HE also had to take a radio lesson once a week.

SHE wanted him to know how to shut it off in case they were hiding from a collector.

ONE fellow lived way out in the country where they didn't have any current, but he used the windmill to run his saxophone.

HE had to defer a concert last month because there wasn't enough breeze.

HE postponed his musicale until there was more wind.

HE asked the audience to come back sometimes when there was a cyclone.

OF course he could have given them a selection on the piano, but he figured they'd take him for a cheap skate if he played it by hand.

IT'S wonderful to think that we're able to buy such a variety of mechanical instruments, and what we need now is some device that will automatically take care of the payments.

BEAUTY OF SIMPLICITY

By LUCY LOWELL

IT IS more than just theory that simplicity is a basic quality of greatness.

Consider those you have met in your time; the great and the would-be great. How unassuming, artless, even common-place, the former. And how wallowing in pomp and circumstance, how full of pose and gesture, the latter.

Why?

Externals do not create greatness. But they do build up the atmosphere that the thoughtful mind associates with greatness.

They build up this atmosphere in the minds of those who employ them—the would-be great. That is why they do employ them. They feel the necessity for self-assurance.

The really great have no need to create atmosphere.

They would have the feel of greatness within themselves. If they bothered to consider it at all. But they wouldn't bother; their concern is with essential things.

That is why they are great.

When you meet one who tells you about his marvelous achievements, you may know that some doubt exists in his own mind about those achievements.

He is afraid they may not seem to others quite so signal as they appear to himself, and that, in consequence, they may be overlooked.

The really enormous achievement needs no press-agenting. It will stand out like a flame in the night for all to wonder at.

A common-variety of the would-be great is the one who tries to impress with his erudition. The one who scorns popular fiction, popular plays, and all music not written by Wagner.

The really well-informed are not fearful of modern books or music. They know that from the most unpretentious sources they may gather information. Nor do they go around airing their knowledge to impress people.

Beware of the one who poses even ever so little. All pose bespeaks a shifty foundation of character.

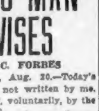
TRAIL LEADER, YOUNG MAN ADVISES

By B. C. FORBES

A NEW YORK, Aug. 20.—Today's column is not written by me. It is contributed, voluntarily, by the



B. C. Forbes

Rev. Dan Poling Robinson, who tally "hiked" the column in shorthand and transcribed it. Doning's from such a source, a should carry weight with other young people who are ambitious to advance in the world, for the writer is not said to say such things, but says them because he is convinced of their soundness. He heads his piece "Respect for Leadership Brings Invaluable Benefits."

"How often," he says, "the regular writer of this column receives letters from youths who are desirous of learning what course to follow in business. Many state they are employed as clerks; there are those employed in mechanical lines; several have no special vocation. Discouragement, dissatisfaction or undetermined ideas of what their lot should be are often indicated.

"The pivot around which the whole situation revolves probably is that these young men have been unable to respect Leadership. They either want too much before they have started or they don't apply themselves so as to be convincing. The most insistence advice is given to rule others unless he has had the qualified training and insight of experience to tackle his job. Rare are the cases where a man reaches the heights simply because he was 'put' there. In order to hold on he must know the material that will make him steadfast.

"Big business, better business, good living and reasonable compensation all had for its beginning Leadership—Leadership that gave itself to hours and hours of work and study to attain the goal. Leadership that deprived itself of pleasure. Leadership that grew until it pained, but Leadership, nevertheless, that when it was moving in these cycles, probably was an obscure clerk in a bank, a machine hand in a factory or just working with no thought of what was to be the reward.

"But you ask, 'How can I show but I have this Leadership?'

"Well, it is my candid opinion that, no matter what form of work you may be following, you can bring yourself to the attention of higher-ups—first, by surmounting obstacles rather than avoiding them; second, by not fretting over little troubles; third, by hard work, which eventually is carried with it higher remuneration.

"The start of Leadership in nine cases out of ten begins in the home, especially with the father. A father who has sons should make it his duty from time to time to lend them as much help as possible, before they leave school, in choosing vocations. By giving them such of his counsel and talking over the various lines of business, a father and son can reach an understanding and cooperation that should mean success for the boy. Youths who learn what Leadership is in their home seldom fail to follow it in their own life.

"No man arrives at the head of a concern before he has trodden the rough spots and gone through the routine of years of hard work.

"Scores of our big corporation heads today will tell you that they had to forsake home and get out in the world earlier in life than many of the boys here about. But this proved no impediment to their rising in the business world.

"What, boy, has and cry is raised 'My father has no pull,' I'm good, but I don't get a chance.' Why should I kill myself working, there's nothing in it,' the illegal sincerity of the whiner is all tommyrot. He wants to get a lot out of, but doesn't want to put a lot into his work.

"Rome wasn't built in a day. Neither can a young man get out of his work more than he puts into it, and keep profiting into it."

Sound logic. It is not?

WHAT HAPPENS WHEN BIG MEN ARE STRICKEN

By FRANK H. MELOON, Financial Editor

What happens in the stock market when big men are stricken? Generally the temporary effect is not to be pronounced, probably because it is true that the market usually goes to extremes. The pendulum swings too far in one direction or the other and the so-called "corrective movement" follows.

* * *

A half dozen instances may be reviewed as examples. When W. C. Durant, former General Motors automotive giant, was injured in a train wreck, the stock market took a sharp set-back. There was another setback soon afterward when it became known that George F. Baker, the great individual holder of American Telephone, was in a leading financier's wife ill. Cities Service suffered a downswing when it was stated Henry L. Doherty was in poor health several months ago. Doubtless because Ford stock is neither for sale nor sale, there was no evident market response when Henry Ford was injured in an automobile crash several weeks ago.

Probably if the injuries to Mr. Ford had been of a more serious nature the market would have been disturbed, for the richest man of all time could not pass out of the picture without causing a serious upsetting the smooth order of things. The death of Judge Elbert H. Gary this month had only a temporary effect, because the business men and financial house the great industrial leader had been amply set in order. The death of J. Ogden Armour the following day caused no disturbance in the packing issues, because the worst had been apparently discounted. Mr. Armour having been ill for a long time in London before the painful end was reached.

Business magazines are busy again explaining why, in the opinion of writers, this country is so prosperous. The impels us to re-print the following from this column as of June 9, 1927:

"Howard Coonley, president of the Walworth Company, in recounding the advantages at command of manufacturers which their rivals do not have, cites 'the advanced skill of American workmen.' This follows declaration made in our column May 16 that was also mentioned by President Coonley, are 'American efficiency, made possible by our methods of mass production and our great wealth as a nation.'"

Howard Coonley

Mr. Coonley, former president of the Boston Chamber of Commerce, "says it with dollars." Walworth, Inc., is a large mid-West, but expanding in that direction, reports large net earnings for the first six months of 1927.

Study of the monthly index of the U. S. Department of Commerce figures, announcing an approximate decline of 3 per cent. in the total cost of food for the somewhat far back period of the month ended July 15, shows that at least a large part of the supposed recession is due to the usual drop in the price of potatoes, due to the marketing of the first of the new crop. As this happens every year, in due course of nature, cultivation and harvesting, the decline looks as if it would be more in the line of phenomena if it did not take place than if it transpired.

Measured by the American Ice Co. yardstick, this Summer has been about 10 per cent. cooler than that of 1927. Let my friend Henry Ford mer home the "hearth fire" was kept burning all night for the first time since Pocahontas, and in fact a bit earlier than that happened last year, and this year has not passed a 10 per cent. cooler Winter might balance up things.

I am told that sales of American Ice Co. are running 10 per cent. less than last year, due to the cooler weather this Summer. Outcome for the year depends largely on weather the next four or five weeks. Sales for first six months of 1927 were $3,246,260, against $3,091,091 in 1926.

Following our suggestion this week of lower utility rates to increase profits, Brockton Edison Company announces voluntary reductions in electric rates. Three different scales of rate charges offered and saving of $50,000 annually in electric light bills of consumers in district will result.

HOW BOSTON'S CASH IS KEPT ON DEPOSIT

City of Boston had cash deposits on July 31 amounting to $1,566,450. Six banks leading depositories were: Merchants National, $154,166; Exchange Trust, $129,838; Second National, $123,720; Federal, $120,000; $119,716; United States Trust, $111,654; Atlantic National, $105,199.

COTTON ADVANCES TO NEW HIGHS OF SEASON

New York, Aug. 20 (A.P.).—Cotton advanced to higher prices of the season today when one of the largest buying movements of the year forced quotations up more than $2 a bale. December went up to 21.05 cents a pound, against 20.43 cents at the close yesterday.

Wall Street Gossip

GOODRICH sold at a new high.

NEW HAVEN sold up on director's prediction dividends would be resumed in 1928.

JEWEL TEA had earnings for twenty-eight weeks ended July 16 equal to $3.30 a share on common against $2.80 a share in like period of 1926.
